Odd Cures For Seasickness.

Among curious remedies for seasickness is that which is popular among the mariners in the levant—the daily swallowing of iron rust, which is obtained by the simple process of scraping it off the anchor or anchor chain. But this is only part of the treatment, for a small pouch containing roasted salt and flowers of thyme must be tied upon the abdomen as firmly as can be borne, this being considered to counteract the effect of the internal disturbance caused by the rolling of the vessel. Known to the ancient Greeks as "thyman salt," the preparation has at least the authority of old age, while its efficacy is not without modern testimony. And the belt is better than salt and faith better than the belt.

Teaches a Lesson.

The Spit of Ceremony.

Among the Akikuyu of East Africa, described by Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Routledge in "With a Prehistoric People," to spit upon a person or thing indicates good will. "The blacksmith spits upon the sword he has forged before handing it over to the owner. So, too, courtesy demands that a man should spit in his hand before offering it to a friend, and the female visitors spit upon the newly arrived youngster as a sign of welcome." Even in England there are relics of the same custom in the habit among the lower classes of spitting on a coin.

Laugh For An Hour And A Half

With the pleasant weather here, the attendance at the picture shows is improving and next Wednesday evening's five part Kleine comedy, "The Fixer" will furnish an hour to two of entertainment, which will be one continuous laugh.

Leap Year Party

One of the first leap year parties of the season was held last Saturday evening, at the C. I. C. hall, when about a score of the fair sex of Estacada and vicinity, entertained an equal number of the men.

Dancing was the order of the evening, followed by refreshments, the festivities continuing until a late hour.

A four year old colt belonging to Eb Lacey of Springwater was seriously injured a week or so ago by careless hunters, the animal receiving a bad bullet wound in the rump. Mr. Lacey reports that considerable other damage has been done in his neighborhood in the past few months by reckless hunters.
