

What Are We Going To Do?

Probably if the publisher of the News was an old, experienced hand at the business, he would be wise enough to refrain from showing any preferences among the political candidates, until after the primaries, thereby standing a much better chance of antagonizing no one and consequently reaping a few more dollars in campaign advertising.

But, if in order to take in more of the candidates advertising money, the News has to keep still and see Eastern Clackamas County unrepresented in the next County Court, it will dispense with the added income.

There is no need of beating around the bush in summing up the present political aspect, as far as it regards this community and this part of the county.

The way conditions are right now, the chances of Eastern Clackamas County being represented in the coming County Court, would hardly be worth a three-to-one bet, but this condition can be remedied.

The Republicans of Eastern Clackamas County have got to stand together and stick together for one of our three Republican candidates, for all three cannot be nominated and one of them cannot receive the nomination, if the others receive much support.

Indications point to a willingness on the part of a large number of the voters in other parts of the county, to see Eastern Clackamas represented as the western and northern parts are now represented by good men. With the help of this outside vote, Eastern Clackamas stands a good chance of winning, providing this district does not defeat its own objects by scattering the votes.

Of the candidates who have filed for the local nomination, all are good, clean, business men and taxpayers, but a choice must be made. At the outset of the campaign many good men signified a willingness to make the run and after a spell of elimination, J. W. Reed was left supposedly as the only one in the field. Mr. Reed several times offered to withdraw in favor of other candidates and only accepted the candidacy, after it was understood that other parties now in the race, would not be competitors.

Now it is up to the voters to decide the matter, will they stick together for the original candidate in the field, or will they let the Republican nomination go by default to a candidate from some distant part of the county; for that is bound to be the result of a split up vote?

No matter who is finally nominated and elected to the County Court, he will undoubtedly well

Handsome Residence

Under Construction

One the best advertisements that Estacada has today, is the neat looking row of homes on the brow of the Terrace Addition Hill, which first meets the eye of the traveller, coming in on the trains.

To this row is now being added another neat home, which when completed will represent about a $2,000. investment, as Dr. Lee A. Wells of Estacada is having a handsome residence built.

The foundations are already in, the work being in charge of Contractor Burd, who will also do the plastering and similar work. The carpentry is being handled by Earl Shibley of Springwater, while the overseeing and architect's duties are in the hands of Edward Misener, of Portland, a cousin of Dr. Wells. Mr. Misener and family last week moved to Estacada, occupying the Pyle house nearby.

The residence when completed will be thoroughly up-to-date, with hardwood floors, large airy rooms, latest plumbing, with wide porches and sleeping porch. Dr. Wells, who is now permanently located in Estacada, expects to occupy the premises early in June.

Packard vs. Ford

One of Estacada's auto enthusiasts (name withheld) last Thursday morning, while Fording down one of Portland's slippery streets, successfully completed the skid act at the same time that a big Packard touring car came around the corner. The repair man, who acted as surgeon in the case, claims the front axle of the Ford was so badly bent, that it spelled the word "Givens," but no further harm was done.

Earl Wagner of Estacada, who is working with Alec Irvin and Ward Jones at Clackamas Station, spent Sunday at the home of his parents.

Cecil Schock and Noble Mc Millan of Estacada, who are on their way to El Paso, Texas by auto, were at Tijuana, Mexico, last week and leaving for their destination in a few days.

Rev. Spiess of the Estacada M. E. Church is meeting with success in his canvass of the local business men, for contributions towards the expense incurred in the building of the church basement. If Rev. Spiess has missed you, it was not intentional and your contribution, no matter the amount, will be thankfully received.

Mrs. C. C. Saling of Currinsville entertained a number of the young people at a dinner party last Thursday evening.
