The Other Side Of The Controversy

While it is not customary to reproduce anonymous letters, in fairness to all concerned, the following communication should be given publicity.

Estacada, Ore.

To the Editor:-

It seems strange that the editor of such a progressive paper as that published in Estacada, should become so narrow minded as to publish, without first thoroughly investigating the facts, such an erroneous account about the imported house, as appeared in last week's News, I am sure that you have been misinformed.

Instead of being against helping the home business men, I am just the opposite. I think I can truthfully say that I have bought a thousand times as much merchandise in Estacada as I have sold there. Many times I have tried to sell a small quantity of produce in that lively enterprising town, but could not.

You stated that the purchase was made through an Eastern Company, you were wrong. You also said that the money was earned here, again you were wrong. True the material was purchased out of the state. But it is also true that the money, to pay for the same, was earned in the state from whence the lumber came.

You quoted a few commandments and I am sure that if I could not be more original, I'd play clam.

Can you blame a person for patronizing the mail order houses? Just a few days ago I bought a couple of pieces of merchandise, in Estacada, at just double the price quoted by a mail order house. I brought them home and found that one was worthless. I can cite you to dozens of just such instances. Did I cry? No, not through the paper. If I had anything to say I faced the party. I did not backbite.

I wish I had time to write an article for your paper. (Oh! you wouldn't publish it.) Well, the Courier might. I must work day and night tho' if I am going to put all that lumber into a house of 4 or 5 rooms.

Now, Mr. Editor if you were not the author of that offensive comment please hand this criticism to the originator.

The builders of the Vexatious House,

The editor is taking full blame for the original article referred to and may have been misinformed by others as to some of the facts.

As to the originality of the Mail Order Commandments, the original article credits same to an eastern newspaper and as all rural communities are trying to combat the mail order evil, they were applicable to this or any other section.

Believing that the best way to offset an evil is to give fair publicity to both sides of the question, the News would like to ascertain for the benefit of the Estacada merchant, further details relative to the "two pieces of merchandise, bought in Estacada, at double mail order prices, one of which was worthless" as in fairness to the merchant and buyer the former will want to replace the worthless article, but it is doubtful if the discrepancy in prices mentioned exists.

Miss Veryl Johnson of Roseburg is spending a few weeks as the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Ray Eschleman of Estacada.
