Centrally Located Fair

the George Community, Sandy and the East Clackamas County fairs, the result would be at least a fifty per cent. improvement.

Every farmer in Clackamas County can be more easily interested in attending a centrally located fair and can also be more easily interested in exhibiting at such a fair. Where a grower has an exhibit, the chances are that he and his family will be present, which guarantees attendance.

The changing of the location of the fair would naturally represent a loss to Canby, but inasmuch as it would be for the public welfare, the majority of people should be considered.

Again, the question of transportation should be considered, with a more centrally located fair, being accessible by more than one railway. This would not only be a convenience to the people, but is due the Portland Railway Light & Power Company, which today profits nothing from the annual fair staged in the extreme corner of the county, although this same company is each year spending hundreds of dollars in agricultural development along its tributary lines and is the heaviest taxpayer in the county.

With the Southern Pacific Railway, the Willamette Valley Southern Railway and the Portland Light & Power Company, all serving that central part of Clackamas County, within a few miles of Gladstone, such a location would be accessible and a drawing card to the wealthy Molalla and other farming sections, some of which today take little interest in the yearly exhibition.

The county owns the Canby grounds, having purchased same last year at a cost of about $10,000., but as these grounds can be used for a poor-farm, the poor-farm might as well be established; as it is needed and the county court had this plan in mind when it purchased the grounds.

The expenses of such a change should not be exorbitant, as land could probably be leased and buildings would soon have to be built to replace the old ones at Canby.

Few good reasons can be advanced for continuing to hold the annual fair at the Canby grounds and it is hoped that before the year is over, some efforts will be made to find a more suitable and equitable location.

Among the penciled news notes received this week from our Springwater correspondent, was an addenda or post-script, reading "cheese - cream puffs - cake", whether that was just a personal notation to insure dessert at the Peterson home, or whether it represented an abbreviated news item, remains to be seen, but the editor could not make a good story without further details.

With potato digging and buying now well underway, reports are being received of bumper potato crops, among them being 210 sacks of "American Wonders" dug on the Ewalt farm in Springwater, from two acres of land. Some of the samples shown at this office were half the size of watermelons.
