Farmer's Accepting Workmen's Compensation

"The Workmen's Compensation Law is gaining in Oregon every day, with a number of farmers in the Estacada country taking advantage of its benefits"—says Harold A. Wilkins, auditor for the State Industrial Accident Commission.

Mr. Wilkins, who visits this community two or three times per year, last week called attention to the number of farmers in this section, namely about a dozen, who are now under the provisions of the state's insurance, against accidents, to themselves and their employees.

The majority of the businesses in this county, where power driven machinery is used, are accepting this form of industrial insurance, being not only one of the cheapest forms of policy, but being contributed to in part by the workmen themselves.
