Delivering the Bull by Auto

As an example of the up-to-dateness of present herding and round-up facilities employed locally, last Wednesday morning, Dockey Palmateer of Garfield drove through Estacada in an automobile, with a rope behind leading a big Holstein bull to the stock yards.

The bull seemed to offer no objections to this latest innovation, acting as though he preferred that means of escort, in preference to the usual wild-west, cowboy style.

This bull was but one of a number of animals shipped from the Estacada yards Wednesday by buyer Givens, a mixed carload of hogs and cattle being loaded.
