With the business men of Estacada on the alert to draw more trade into town and to better serve the customers now buying and selling here, a matter of possibly slight importance has been overlooked in the welcoming of the farmer's faithful companion, his dog.

How often lately, when the farmer is receiving every consideration and form of welcome at the hands of the merchant, his dog, which usually is not only his companion, but is a valuable trained animal, is receiving exactly the opposite treatment from one or more of the town's worthless curs; the farmer often returning to his wagon to find his dog still on the job, but suffering from a badly chewed leg, neck or head.

If Estacada cannot control its useless dogs, it is hoped that some farmer will hit town with a real genuine canine white-hope, which will make a meal of about half of the local pups, and return the next day and devour the other half.

Its old case Love me, Love my Dog and true hospitality to a farmer, does not include the licking of his companion.

In an editorial appearing in the Oregon City Enterprise last week entitled "A Man's Worth" a fitting tribute to County Judge H. S. Anderson was given and the taxpayers were commended for having recommended the increase of $800. per year in the judge's salary.

In this connection, the News also wants to go on record as heartily favoring this recommendation, realizing, as it is in a position to do, that the services rendered by Judge Anderson in the conduct of this county, if directed along personal or other business lines, would warrant a salary or income of several thousand dollars more per year.

This same consideration and increase in salaries should be extended to the members of the county court and to probably many other county officials.

Even if Estacada never gets a cheese-factory, the work that has been done, the co-operation and united efforts that have been made, cannot help but bring returns in other ways, for any community that will stick together, and invite every man into the work; will win in the long run.

Popular Carrier Resigns

It was reported Wednesday that A. Demoy, who for years has handled the rural mail delivery on Route 1—Estacada, resigned his position, the resignation to be effective when designated by the postal department.

No reasons have been assigned for the resignation and it is probable that Mr. Demoy wishes to devote his entire attention to his Estacada ranch, where his many friends wish him the success which is his due.

An Expanation

Referring to the photographic reproduction on the front page of this paper, we beg to state that no prize is being offered to those identifying the intended gentleman.

As the photographer said when he took the original photo, "I did the best I could with the subject at hand," and we as the printers, did the best we could with a fine screened electrototype, made expressly for printing on high grade smooth paper.

STORY OF THE PENNY GIRL.

Likeness on the Old Cent Was That of Sarah Longacre.

In 1835 the government of the United States made an offer of $1,000 for the most acceptable design to be placed upon the new one cent coin soon to be issued. Some Indian chiefs traveled from the northwest to Philadelphia to inspect the mint, whose chief engraver was James Barton Longacre, who invited them to his house.

The engraver's daughter, Sarah, ten years old, greatly enjoyed the visit of her father's guests, and during the evening, to please her, one of the chiefs took his feathered helmet and war bonnet and placed it on her head. In the company was an artist, who immediately sketched her and handed the picture to her father, Mr. Longacre, knowing of the competition for a likeness to go upon the cent, resolved to enter the sketch for the prize offered by the government. To his delight, the officials accepted it, and the face of his daughter appeared upon the coin.

The face of Sarah Longacre has gone into more hands, more pockets, more homes, more stores—yes, more churches—than any other coin in the United States, if not in the world.—Pittsburgh Leader.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

Three strong reasons urge you to buy the Ford car: First, because of its record of satisfactory service to more than fifteen hundred thousand owners; Second, because of the reliability of the Company which makes it; Third, because of its large radiator and enclosed fan, streamline hood, crown fenders front and rear, black finish, nickel trimmings, it is most attractive in appearance. To these must be added its wonderful economy in operation and maintenance—about two cents a mile; likewise the fact that by reason of its simplicity in construction anyone can operate and care for it. Nine thousand Ford agents make Ford service as universal as the car.

Touring Car $360.—Runabout $345.—f. o. b. Detroit.
