Heres a Conundrum

hesitated to expose some of the rottenness of the past Clackamas County Fair Association of which His Honor was president. Despite the fact that the only time that Clackamas County ever won the first prize at a State Fair, was when the exhibit was in charge of ye editor, a few years ago—ye editor was never urged to assume the responsibilities a second time, for newspaper men occasionally ferret out and disclose matters of interest to taxpayers, that might better be kept among the relics of political oblivion.

Judge Dimick is doing a good work for the hog and corn raising interests of this county and the residents of this county would be much better off if the Hon. Grant would spend more time in rural pursuits and less in threatening political oblivion to all Clackamas representatives, who do not play the game of politics to suit him and his gang.

In conclusion, let it be said, that as long as the Eastern Clackamas News is edited, published and owned by the present management—it will continue along those Fire-Brand lines attempting in its feeble way to act as a beacon to the home taxpayers, guiding them to political safety, economy and a better home community—lighting their way to contentment, peaceful living and a just pride in the home county and always casting its glow into the dark corners, disclosing the rottenness and filth of the political corruption that has characterized a certain phase of Oregon City's life and has dominated Clackamas County for the past fifty years.

Noted Eastern Socialist Coming

Victor J. McCone State Secretary-Treasurer of the Oregon Socialist Party, delivered a free lecture in the Boner Theatre January 31, 1917 at 8 P. M. Mr. McCone is well known in public life in Oregon having opposed the boycotting of farmers products and advocating instead the socialization of all food producing distributing and storage agencies.

The cost of transcribing the Clackamas County records to the records of the proposed Cascade County have been greatly exaggerated by the opposition. For the benefit of those misinformed the News submits the following figures furnished by the Clerk of the newly formed Jefferson County. The entire cost for a typewritten transcription, of said county records amounts to $9000. By using the photographic method, this amount can easily be reduced to between $2500 and $3000.

Looking It Up.

He was that type of genteel beggar that "puts up a front," as the fellows say. His face had more tears in it than a cemetery, and he was just getting ready to tell his down and outer's tale when the man at the desk reached into a drawer and brought forth a dictionary, placing it in front of the appealing one.

"What do you want—sympathy?" the man at the desk asked.

"Yes, sympathy," was the half sobbed reply.

"Look in 8 for it. I saw it there the other day."

The sympathy chaser grunted and headed for the door. He wasn't looking for work, just sympathy—in the form of a piece of loose change.—Indianapolis News.

Reckless Disregard.

"The law of supply and demand," said the economist, "is as inexorable as the law of gravitation."

"You can't always enforce either of them. The law of gravitation doesn't prevent people from getting up in the air these days."—Washington Star.
