An Apology

Having in the past few weeks given publicity to several entertainments, dances and athletic stunts, which were to have been given under the auspices of the soldiers of Company D, and which at the last minute were postponed or cancelled, the News wishes to apologize for its part in having mislead or dissatisfied the public, although it was in no ways to blame.

In each instance, including the dance scheduled for last Saturday evening, the affair was called off after the paper had gone to press. As the lives and plans of soldiers are matters over which they have little control, they too should not be too severely criticised, for they were as sorely disappointed at having to go without a dance, as was any of the public.
