Escaped Convicts Reported Near Estacada

A little excitement was engendered last Saturday noon, when Sheriff Wilson and deputies of Oregon City stopped in Estacada for lunch, on their way to Beaver Creek Canyon, where it was reported some of the convicts who escaped from the Salem penitentiary were in hiding.

City Marshal John Page at once considered heading a posse to aid in the search but after polishing his star and borrowing the editor's shot gun (which he never had returned from the last time he borrowed it) was unable to get sufficient followers to join in the man hunt.

On Monday morning, Constable Ed Bates of Estacada called to borrow the editor's shot gun, as he and deputies had been notified to guard the Estacada bridge, as the convicts were reported to have been seen near Fisher's Mill and headed towards Estacada.

Considering Building A Catholic Chapel

During the course of the services held at the F. J. Harkenrider home in Estacada last Sunday by Rev. Father Hogan of Portland, plans were considered for the building of a Catholic Chapel in this community.

The mild epidemic of scarletina in the Eagle Creek district is proving a tedious and profitless affair for Ben Forrester, Walter Glover, Guy Clester and others, who are quarantined and consequently handicapped in their work.
