The Fourth Liberty Loan

The drive for the Fourth Liberty Loan officially starts on the 28th, but it is hoped that here in Oregon, the State's quota will be subscribed for on or before that date, when the committee may announce that "it is all over but the shouting."

More than ever upon the successful issue of this loan, depends our country's honor and welfare. We have put our hands to the plough and woe be to us if we look back. Our boys at the front, who have already laid down their lives, as well as those who are offering themselves upon their country's altar, will rise up in judgment, if we who are being kept safe by their sacrifices, fail them at this hour.

There is only one thing that we can do, and God help us if we don't do it, and that is to set our faces as flints to carry through our undertaking to the very end. There can be no peace until this is accomplished. By the readiness with which we at home furnish the sinews of war, we shall impress our determination on the enemy.

The following lines taken from a recent number of the Boston Transcript, voice what is the only possible answer we can give to those who shrink and flinch from their paramount duty at this time.

"We who against the muzzles of the guns
Have flung the naked bodies of our sons,
Dare we to falter, palter, hedge, refrain?
Nay, cry the onset! Close our ranks again!
The price they paid shall not be paid in vain."

A Bouquet

The Editor has received this commendation from a newspaper friend in LaGrande, for which he is extremely grateful:

"Let me congratulate you on the improvement in the appearance of the paper. It is great. I am thoroughly familiar with every weekly paper in Oregon, big and little, and I am free to say typographically, editorially and as to arrangement of matter and ads, the News is inferior to none. I feel certain that your efforts are being appreciated in Estacada."
