Never a Night Before
Away From Home

The whole town was gathered on the platform that morning to see the train pull out—men and women and children, waving and cheering and trying hard to keep on smiling through their tears.

Out of the car windows leaned the boys to wave a last good-bye. Just average clear-eyed country town boys; twenty of them altogether. And seventeen of them had never slept a night away from home before.

They are dwelling in a strange land tonight, whose language they cannot understand.

But across the mud and the snow a light gleams warm from a hut on the edge of the town, and inside good cheer and happiness are ready for whoever will come in to claim them.

Friendship dwells in the hut; keeps its warm fires burning bright this winter. Let it be perfectly clear to the men over there that you have not forgotten.

To the men that only a little while ago were boys who had never slept a night away from home.

—By Bruce Barton.
