Two Ways To Handle Water

There's the old way—BY HAND. It means pump, pump, pump and carry, carry, carry, till you hate the sight of a water bucket. From 50 to 200 tons of water are handled every year on the average farm. Why waste your time and strength when machinery will do this work easier, quicker and better? Get a

It's a "Direct from the Well" system and supplies absolutely fresh water anywhere you want it, day or night.

You can have hot and cold, hard or soft water—water in the house and water in the barn and yard. Any number of pumps will operate from one power equipment. Use the engine you have. This system brings water ten feet or a mile, and supplies it at high pressure for fire protection. No water storage tank used.

Phone us now about the cost for an outfit for your place. The price will be reasonable. Ask us to tell you all about the advantages of handling water

Big Cherries

"Taking two bites to a cherry," has always been regarded as expressive of superfluous action, but it does not apply to "the Pride of Oregon" variety.

We saw this week a large dishpan full of these superb cherries which came from a tree in P. M. Wagner's garden.

COMMUNICATION

To Prospective berry growers and others interested in putting Estacada on the map as a live berry producing district: We are past that period of talk "wondering if it would pay," "could we find a market for our berries?" etc., etc.

The only one thing to do is this fall and winter is to get ready and set out a substantial acreage and see us growers about plants, as several of us have loganberries Lawton, blackberries, Clark seedling, strawberries, red raspberries, currants, etc. When this is done, then we can have a CANNERY.

When we get a cannery then our bank, merchants, berry pickers and growers around Estacada will see prosperity. The other growers and I are all too busy at present to talk, so I am writing this little piece hoping for your hearty cooperation so we can have a real live little burg out at Estacada. I am yours most sincerely,
W. R. Woodworth
