Two Ways To Handle Water

There's the old way—BY HAND. It means pump, pump, pump and carry, carry, carry, till you hate the sight of a water bucket. From 50 to 200 tons of water are handled every year on the average farm. Why waste your time and strength when machinery will do this work easier, quicker and better? Get a

It's a "Direct from the Well" system and supplies absolutely fresh water anywhere you want it, day or night.

You can have hot and cold, hard or soft water—water in the house and water in the barn and yard. Any number of pumps will operate from one power equipment. Use the engine you have. This system brings water ten feet or a mile, and supplies it at high pressure for fire protection. No water storage tank used.

A Well Deserved Development

The Enterprise has been in its present quarters more than 30 years, and has twice, within the last 12 years, had additions constructed. The last time it was necessary to erect another story on a portion of the building.

In its new home all of the operations of the Enterprise will be on one floor, making for efficiency in handling its products. The structure, when remodeled, enlarged and finally completed, will be one of the best newspaper and printing buildings in the state, and our removal will enable us to give even better service to our constantly growing list of patrons than before. The Enterprise is able to boast that it distributes in Oregon City annually more than $20,000 in wages, and that it is a worthwhile institution in the growth and progress of our city and state—Oregon City Enterprise.

The heartiest congratulations and the best of success to you Bro. Brodie. When we get that projected "best seller" written, which we have had long in mind, we won't have to go further than the County Seat to have it published.

Mrs. Lena Underwood went to Portland Wednesday.
