BURGLAR BREAKS INTO A. E. SPARK'S STORE

Monday night about 11 o'clock, A. E. Sparks had occasion to go down to his store, and on entering and turning on the light, he heard some one at the rear making a hurried getaway. Mr. Sparks gave the alarm, to which a number of men in Bob Marchbank's restaurant responded. An automobile was standing near and they turned its spot light across the street, which revealed a man crouching at the back of the old Park hotel. On being thus discovered he made a bolt for it. Clyde Schock got a gun from Bob Marchbank and fired a shot at the man, but evidently failed to hit him. He is described as being rather tall and slim. Investigation showed that entrance had been obtained through the rear door of the bank building which leads to the upstairs rooms. The burglar had gone through the window in the hall way which opens on to the roof of the warehouse, from which he had ascended to the roof of the store. There is a cover door on the roof which was not fastened, by means of which the man had gotten inside and then into the store through a small trap door in the ceiling of the toilet of the rest room in the gallery. Muddy marks where his shoes had scraped were made on the walls. Evidently he had hardly begun operations when Mr. Sparks entered the store, for about all that is found missing is two odd gloves. In his hurry the man left behind a nickle flash light. At first it was thought to be one belonging to a respectable citizen, who on being shown it, thought it was his, which he had left in Marchbank's pool hall. But on closer examination it proved to be one of larger size. This can be seen as Exhibit A in the window of the East Clackamas Supply Co's. store.

As our neighboring towns have had visits of this nature during the winter, it is not sur-

Obsequies of Mrs. Kandle

The final rites for the late Mrs. W. H. Kandle were held yesterday at the Christian Church, at 2 p. m., being conducted by Elder Wright of Portland. The attendance was large and the floral offerings beautiful. Her son Charles Kandle whose coming from Philadelphia was awaited, arrived with his wife on Tuesday. The interment took place in Lone Oak cemetery.

prising that Estacada should receive like attention. Our merchants better take some precautionary measures in case there should be a repetition with more success.

Water Troubles

Wednesday night the water was shut off on the upper flat as the main which runs through Mrs. Heylman's property was being taken up, in accordance with orders from her attorney. It will be recalled she won a suit recently against the city on account of leakage from this pipe which damaged the basement of her house. More litigation against the city from this quarter is now threatened, for taking up the pipe altho ordered by her attorney. If it were not removed, suit also would be brought. The city is in the plight of the man who will be—if he does or if he don't.

Newspapers Help

College Expose Fraud

Sale of low grade arsenical sprays in Oregon has been checked by publicity given by the chemistry department of the college experiment station through the state and county newspapers. Immense damage was caused by use of low grade arsenical mixtures in the beginning. The station proved the possibility of better material, manufacturers brought out a better product, and growers who must spray save enormous sums every year as a result. Fear of station discovery and newspaper publicity gives the low-grade dealer little chance to do business in Oregon.

Wilcox Bros. Sell Cars

The following have bought new cars from Wilcox Bros. of the Cascade Garage, during the past few days: George Forman of Barton, a Chandler, Messrs. Tom Beebe of Garfield, Hull and Joe Guthridge of Springwater, Dan Erdman of Boring and George Smith of Eagle Creek, Chevrolets.

Pool Hall Changes Hands

The pool hall recently run by Messrs. Liest and Ben Urfer, adjoining the Family Theatre, has been taken by George H. Davis of Portland, who is making repairs and fixing it up.

PORTLAND EDITOR ADDRESSES CLUB

The Community Club held a most interesting meeting Friday evening at the Estacada hotel. There was considerable discussion of the Mt. Hood road project and it was shown by Mr. Bartlett that if the Highway Commission could be induced to locate the road by way of Estacada, that there would be only a few miles of actual construction work, on account of the county road building already arranged for. The matter was referred to J. W. Reed and E. W. Bartlett to be presented to the Commission at the earliest date possible.

The principal address of the evening was given by Mr. E. E. Favelle, editor of the Western Farmer of Portland, who spoke entertainingly on better livestock production. He was followed by County Agent Scott along similar lines. A piano solo by Nova Smith, a duet by Mrs. Wooster and Miss Helen and Community singing led by Miss Ruth Dillon formed a very entertaining musical program.

A Sudden Death

W. L. Stafford, a brother of Mrs. W. W. Boner and uncle of Mrs. W. A. Heylman, who had made his home with the latter during the past year, dropped dead suddenly on the streets of Seattle where he had gone on a visit, February 21st. An inquest was held and heart failure given as cause. Mrs. Heylman went to Seattle but did not wait for the interment which was to be at Everett, Wash. Full particulars have not been received.

Free Seeds

The American Legion has left at this office a number of packages of vegetable seeds, beet, carrot, lettuce, onion and radish. While they last these will be given away to applicants calling for the same.
