BETWIXT BAY AND ROLLING OCEAN

When the S. P. R. R. line was nearing completion from Portland to Tillamook, a well-known Portland capitalist noted a spur of land jutting out between Tillamook Bay and the Pacific ocean. Being gifted with an imagination and a vision, he conceived its possibilities as a summer resort and playground. He immediately took steps to develop the same under the appropriate name of Bayocean, investing a large amount of his own capital. A company was formed and extensive preparations and plans drawn up. Lots were platted, streets laid out and hard-surfaced, two hotels built, and one of the largest natatoriums in the country. In all a quarter of a million or more dollars were invested and for a few seasons the patronage was very good. Then other resorts springing up along the mainland coast drew off visitors, and the chief promoter died. The property became involved in expensive litigation and turned over to a receiver. Since then it has been an uphill struggle, but in spite of this it presents eloquent testimony of a great conception which yet may be successfully realized. For those who spend a week or more there, become enamored with the place, as it has the advantages of both bay and ocean beaches, the latter being unsurpassed.

The writer and his wife have just returned from their third visit to Bayocean, and while this time, the weather was considerably foggy and the wind blew a good deal more than was pleasant, they enjoyed their stay immensely, taking long walks and congratulating themselves having escaped the heat from which other parts of the state were suffering. The trip from Portland takes about eight or nine hours going by way of Hillsboro and thence west to the coast. The route is very picturesque and the greater part being through heavy timber, winding down canyons until the coast level is reached. The first glimpse of the ocean is obtained at Wheeler, which is a lumber mill, on the arm of the bay opposite Nehalem, and Neah-kah-nie mountain. From there the railroad runs along the borders of the ocean and bay to Tillamook, with resorts all along the way. Transfer for Bayocean is made at Bay City, where a launch meets passengers, the trip across the bay taking about half an hour.

On arrival they are met by the manager and escorted to the hotel or the bungalow city which is a very popular feature of the place. This is a regular camp on the bay side, nestling under the lee of a hill. The bungalows are 20x12, divided into two parts, living and sleeping quarters, which are furnished with stove and equipment for light house-keeping. Each contains two beds, one double and one single, to accommodate three or four persons. But whole families squeeze themselves in at a pinch. Water, electric light and fuel are also furnished being included in the rent, which is $14.00 a week or $40.00 per month. The camp this month is fully occupied, many being turned away or forced to wait at the hotel until a vacancy occurs.

The principal diversions are crabbing and clamming at low tide on the bay side, dipping in the surf in the ocean or swimming in the tank at the natatorium, hiking along the beach, or over the cliff through the woods to the Cape Mear's Light house or to the neighboring Netarts beach, then in the evening sitting by beach fires telling stories and roasting wieners or marshmallows.

The natatorium has a tank over a hundred feet long and the water is warmed before being let into the tank, while fresh water showers are provided both cold and hot. It possesses one feature which is unique, artificial surf. This year the machinery was out of repair, so it was not turned on. But the writer was

Chatauqua Guarantees

The committee for securing a sufficient number of names to assure the Chatauqua here another year, is working this week, trying hard to complete their work. Over sixty of the hundred names necessary, have been obtained. After the recent inspirational talk on Community spirit by Dr. Hawn, it would be expected that there would be a readiness to respond to all efforts for improvement of an educational and cultural sort. The Chatauqua held here this summer was decidedly good and uplifting, the various numbers being fully up to the average of much larger ones with more elaborate programs and higher salaried lecturers and talent.

Wedding Bells Ring Out

On the Night Air

Married—in Oregon City, Saturday, August 14, 1920, Miss Edith I. Perry to Theodore A. Reid.

The young couple are well and favorably known, the bride being the pretty and popular daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Art Perry of Garfield, and the groom the son of Mrs. Nora Reid who lives south of Estacada. They were accompanied by the parents of the bride and mother of the groom to the county seat for the marriage ceremony. The newly married pair returned to the home of the groom's mother Sunday, where that evening their many friends gave them an old fashioned charivari which for noise was never surpassed, and seldom equalled. They will make their home at the groom's mill in the Logan country, accompanied by the best wishes of all who know them.

TRAGIC DEATH AT GARFIELD

Tuesday afternoon a man inquired at the bank where the coroner, sheriff or some one in authority could be found. He informed Mr. Stephens that he had brought that morning, a party of five from Portland to the Nunn ranch in Garfield, which adjoins that of Doc Palmateer. The day before Richard K. Nunn of Portland, brother of the owner of the ranch, had gone out, and on arriving they found him dead, and evidently for some hours. There were evidences they feared of suicide. Milt Marshall, deputy sheriff was notified, who put himself in touch with the authorities. The coroner came out in the evening and with Mr. Marshall and Dr. McCall went out to view the body. Dr. McCall examined it, and gave his opinion that death was caused by a drug. As Dr. Nunn had been in a very nervous condition from over work, evidently he had taken an opiate to induce sleep and inadvertently an over dose, so it was decided that no inquest was necessary. An undertaker of the Holman Co. of Portland was sent out after the remains and took them back that night. The deceased was an eminent oculist and had practiced in Portland from 1882 to 1915, when he went to Europe to work in the war hospitals, in the medical corps of the British army, and had only returned three weeks from overseas. He was a native of England and educated at Dublin university and about sixty-one years of age. He leaves a widow and a son.
