Store Shows*Remarkable Growth

Those who pass the Odd Fellows' building will notice that the store on the ground floor, is becoming well filled up with merchandise, and hereby hangs an interesting tale. A year ago last April 15th, almost eighteen months since, J. K. Ely started in with a small stock of notions. His intention had been to open in the wing, where Mrs. Hay has her dressmaking parlor, but the main store being vacant, Mr. Ely moved in there temporarily as he thought. But although business conditions were rather depressed at the time generally, they shortly began to improve, and Mr. Ely benefitted in consequence. At first his sales were naturally small, as the size of his stock limited the amount. But he persevered adding by degrees this or that line, procuring orders for customers which he filled in the city for them. Thus their number increased and Mr. Ely found he had to increase his stock to supply the demand. For the first year, however, the growth was not very pronounced, but with the opening of 1920 it has made a remarkable progress. At present his stock is ten times as large as when he began, and is a very comprehensive one. He carries full lines of men's and women's furnishing goods, in shoes, hats, rubbers, gloves, hosiery, overalls, women's and children's cotton dresses, etc., while his shelves display a varied assortment of bolt goods in wool and cotton. Ladies who do fancy work can indulge their tastes to the full, as there is a bewildering assortment of silks, mercerized cottons, and yarns, the last named being the famous Fleishman brand in all shades and colors.

Mr. Ely is to be congratulated on the success he has attained, but he brought to it a business experience of several years which proved a most valuable asset. The record of this store is a credit to any man and any town.
