At Pre-war Prices

The fact that with a price of $845, the good Maxwell is now back to the prices of three years ago, is attracting a considerable amount of attention among motorists.

"Two reductions since last fall, have shown the public that the good Maxwell is now priced extremely low," say Reed & Shibley, "and the result is a stimulation in sales that is extremely gratifying."

"The good Maxwell, in our opinion, is now by far the best motor car investment to be had."

"It is a high grade car in every way, has been greatly improved in detail in the past six months, and any person buying one is sure of their money's worth."

"The plans of the new organization will go forward with a new impetus, now that the organization has been completed, and we look for a steadily increasing business with the good Maxwell."
