The Portland School Election

Portland had an exciting election last Saturday for school directors. There were two tickets, one put forth by the federation of patriotic societies, and one, the citizens' ticket, which was endorsed and supported by all the principal Portland papers. The former ticket won out by 2 to 1. There was an exceptionally large vote cast, of over 22,000 ballots, showing the interest that had been aroused. There are rumors of inside politics in connection, which would make very interesting reading, if made public. But a measure which was badly needed, the 3 mills tax for new buildings, was overwhelmingly defeated. This affords a sign which others may well heed, and that is, the limit of taxation has been reached, and the people will not vote an increase of taxes, no matter how important the object. Portland will be compelled to rigidly retrench, and we are told on reliable authority, that the same is being done with other schools all over the western states.

Street Paving

Charles Kitching and H. L. Jones received the contract for doing the street paving, and began work on it this week with a crew of men. The crossing at 2nd street and Broadway is to be paved the full width of Broadway, but from there to the depot 16 feet wide, the sides to be filled with gravel, with the exception of the frontage of the People's Store, which will be paved. The paving is of cement and 6 inches thick. Charles Kitching, Monday afternoon, while bossing proceedings was hit on the head by the handle of the scraper, due to the team suddenly starting up. He received a gash on the forehead which bled considerably, but fortunately did not put him out of commission. When the paving is completed, it will add much to the appearance of the street looking from the depot.
