THE OLD STORY

Although the Anglo-Irish treaty has been ratified by the Dail, and its action apparently meets with public approval, yet peace in Ireland seems still afar off. It promises to continue its reputation of being "the distressful isle." Only the fight now will be between two internal factions instead of against the British government solely. The Sinn Fein extremists headed by De Valera promise to keep things warm for and be "agin" the provisional government. By so doing they are merely confirming what their opponents and critics have always maintained that there was no pleasing them. That given Home Rule, they would fight amongst themselves with a resulting chaos.

Unfortunately, this extreme element will receive sympathy and aid from the extremists on this side, who will do their best to keep the agitation alive. The venerable Cardinal Logue uttered a pregnant comment, when in expressing his satisfaction over the ratification of the treaty, he remarked: "What a blessing it would be if there was union among the Irish people." To which all well wishers of Ireland will respond with a fervent Amen.

THE FAIR SITUATION

The promoters of the fair have not abandoned the project, but are deliberating as to how it is to be financed. The editor of the OREGON VOTER, however, strongly urges its abandonment, as he says it cannot be financed either by subscription or taxation. The editor of the SPECTATOR, on the other hand, thinks that it can be financed by subscription, and indicates a method of raising the necessary amount this way. THE VOTER thinks there is no state-wide demand for the fair, and that it would not benefit the state if it were held. In this latter point we believe it is mistaken. Those who are projecting it are men of business foresight and shrewdness. They understand as well as anyone the business condition of the state, and what it needs for its stimulation and improvement. If they will go throughout the state and make known their reasons, there will be a general response.

PLEASED TO SEE YOU

We have received the initial number of the new journalistic venture in the county, which is published at Oregon city. It is entitled the "PRODUCERS CALL" and styles itself "the champion of the farmers and wage earners," and carries the slogan, "the beginning of a better understanding." M. J. Brown is the editor and H. H. Stallard, state missionary of the Non-Partisan gospel, is associate editor. W. W. Woodbeck of Oregon City, correspondent for the Portland Telegram, and who also has been writing for the Oregon City ENTERPRISE, has been added to its staff. It announces: "It is the aim of this paper to be absolutely independent and to the limit of the editors' ability to print things as they are—to shoot square. Its purpose is not to be destructive, not to tear down, but to be constructive, to help work out a remedy for conditions that we all know must be changed, otherwise sooner or later the masses will go to the wild bunch." We give it the right hand of fellowship, in spite of the fact we shall probably disagree with it very radically, and heartily hope it may promote "the beginning of a better understanding."

The metropolitan papers each day are reporting a husband killing his wife, or vice versa. A third party is invariably involved. This with the increasing number of divorces, is a matter of grave concern, and is the result of the irreligious, unmoral bringing up of children for a number of years. There is a distinction worth noting, between unmoral and immoral.

The OREGONIAN ranks as one of the leading papers in the country—its New Year's edition this year abundantly affords a reason why. It was great, and we sent our copy east for friends there to read, mark, learn and inwardly digest.

U. OF O. NOTES

Starting the second week in January and lasting six weeks, the annual Bible course for Women will be given by the University's Young Women's Christian Association. Leaders of the Bible course are usually faculty women or wives of members of the faculty.

During the month of December ninety-six students registered in 113 courses in the correspondence study department of the Extension Division of the University of Oregon. This brings the total registration in correspondence study courses to 1086, representing every county of the state.

Thirty students have been dropped from the University of Oregon for failure to make passing grades in enough subjects during the fall term. Eighty-one students have been placed on probation for the present term for work that was unsatisfactory. Nineteen hundred students successfully passed the examinations.

The University of Oregon library started the new year with a total of 110,000 volumes.

Barrie's Bad Boy

Sentimental Tommy, who had a way with him, and boasted that he could always find a way, will make his appearance here Saturday night at the Family Theatre, in a Paramount production. Readers of Sir James Barrie's delightful stories of Thrums will be glad to see the village on the screen. Besides the redoubtable Tommy, Elspeth, his little sister; Grizel, the painted-ladie's pathetic daughter; Dr. McQueen and a number of others will appear. Barrie not written a more humorous story than this, and seldom have we been moved to laughter more than when reading about Tommy and his adventures. He was, as one of his boy adherents called him, "such a leetle deevil."

Farm Reminders

Farmers who depend on wet weather and hard freezing to kill their insect pests may be disappointed. Slugs may freeze solid and "come to" as hungry as ever when thawed out. They can also stand "water" provided they are not washed away. Spray of Bordeaux on plates, to be protected, with poisoned bait of chopped leaves sprinkled with calcium arsenate, will often "get" the slugs and save the crop—O. A. C. Experiment station.

Earwigs that feed on the green shoots of roses in the spring, and later turn their attention to the blossoms, nibbling stamens and base of petals may be controlled by the following method: Mix six ounces dry sodium fluorid with one gallon of wheat bran or shorts, and thoroughly moisten with one pint equal parts water and molasses. Scatter in the evening over the lawns or garden where pests occur, especially about the bases of buildings and tree trunks.—O. A. C. Experiment station.

The Story of Our States

By JONATHAN BRACE
 XX.—MISSISSIPPI

THE State of Mississippi derives its name from the river which forms its western boundary. The word itself comes from the Algonquin missi-sepe which means "great river." It is popularly supposed to mean "Father of the Waters" but this interpretation is incorrect. The state is also known as the Bayou State from the many bayous which are formed by the shifting river. In this connection it is interesting to note the uneven course of the Mississippi river. Though the extreme length of the state from the Gulf to Tennessee is 330 miles, the western border, due to the winding of the Mississippi river, extends for nearly 500 miles.

The rivers play an important part in this state. They are so numerous and the country so subject to flood that the river bottoms cover nearly one fifth of the area of the entire state.

The early history of Mississippi is yoked up with that of Louisiana of which it originally formed a part. Discovered by De Soto in 1539, it was not until La Salle sailed down the river and claimed this territory, which he named in honor of his French king, Louis XIV, that a permanent settlement was established.

In 1763 the territory east of the Mississippi was ceded by the French to the English. For a while the lower portion of the present state was called West Florida. After being captured by the Spanish and later returned to the United States, the Territory of Mississippi was extended to its present size of 46,805 square miles and in 1817 it was admitted as the twelfth state of the Union. At the time of the Mexican war, although called upon to supply one regiment of volunteers, Mississippi responded with enough men for two. One of these regiments was commanded by Jefferson Davis, who later was the president of the Confederate states. Since its readmittance to the Union in 1870 Mississippi in national elections has been a Democratic state except in 1872, when it voted for Grant.

Smut Control

The copper carbonate dust treatment for stinking smut of wheat is apparently successful is announced by H. R. Bars, plant pathologist of the O. A. C. Experiment station.

Although definite results cannot be obtained until next harvest, the winter stand of grain in fields thus treated in 17 Oregon counties shows less injury than stands where seed was treated by either the formalde-hide or the bluestone-lime method.

"It is entirely possible that this method may in time supersede the cumbersome liquid treatment," said Professor Bars. "It also seems to promote prompt and more vigorous germination. Two ounces of copper carbonate in dust form are thoroughly mixed with each bushel of seed in a revolving drum.

"The ultimate solution of the smut problem does not lie in improved treating methods, but in the growing of varieties of wheat which are highly resistant or immune to the disease."
