THE DEATH PENALTY

Last Friday morning two convicts, Rathie and Kirby, paid the penalty for their part in the murder of Sheriff Til Taylor, of Umatilla county, two years before. They have now passed beyond human judgment to a tribunal where justice and mercy meet together and where they can be safely left.

But there are those who hold up their hands in horror that the state should exact a life for a life, claiming that it has no more right to do this than an individual has. But their reasoning is faulty. The death penalty was decreed at the very beginning of human history, by the Supreme Authority of all, Who holds in His hands the issues of life and death. "The wages of sin is death." He so declared, and all sin issues in death, partial or complete, death to life, liberty or happiness. Those to whom are entrusted judicial functions, exercise them as the delegates of the Supreme Judge, "for the powers that be are ordained of God." Submission to them is enjoined in Holy Writ as "unto them that are sent by Him for the punishment of evil doers, and for the praise of them that do well."

The extreme death penalty has divine sanction: "at the hand of every man's brother will I require the life of a man. Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed, for in the image of God made He man." Nor has this sanction been abrogated under the Christian dispensation, for it will ever be true that "the wages of sin is death." To take a life in cold blooded murder is sacrilegious, and the penalty must needs be such as shall impress this fact on the consciousness of mankind. If the death penalty is horrible, it is not nearly so much so as the crime which incurred it, for the latter was due to evil passions, while the former is the action of justice awarding to a man what he has brought on himself.

GERMAN CONDITIONS

A writer in the New York Outlook of July 5, paints a very ominous picture of conditions in Germany, from which country he warns all Americans to keep away. He writes: "The Germans themselves are living in splendid misery when it is not abject poverty. The professional and business man clings to outward appearances desperately and tenaciously. It is his last hold on respectability. He will spend money on shoe polish, though he must deny himself a pound of bacon. The women insist upon keeping their big apartments. - - - Life for these classes has become a struggle for existence."

"Foreign and native observers are agreed that another upheaval is sure to come. The masses are too desperate in their dependency to care whether it comes from the Left or the Right. When it comes, woe to aliens, especially Americans. Behind the mask of their smiling greetings they hate us more than all the rest."

Not he says, on account of our part in their defeat, but out of envy of our prosperity compared to their impoverishment.

It is this situation which Lloyd George senses, and which he is trying to avert by endeavoring to get Germany on to her financial feet. America must also aid as soon as satisfactory terms can be arranged, for a bankrupt Germany is a menace all around.

tion is styled "The Ladies of the Invisible Empire." It is rather suggestive of a Turkish harem.

The U. of Oregon has an "ad" in this issue which is of interest to all who are contemplating a university course. The U. of Oregon has an enviable reputation as is shown by many students from other states seeking admittance to its courses.

Attention is called to the statement of the Estacada State Bank in this issue which speaks for itself and shows a very satisfactory condition.

Stimulating Correspondence

One of the best hunches for securing the news that we have noticed in sometime is that used by the Lake County Chronicle, published at Two Harbors, Minnesota. In order to stimulate the bringing in the happenings of the community and to indicate the character of matter wanted the Chronicle asked of its readers:

- If anyone had died?
- Eloped?
- Been divorced?
- Left town?
- Embezzled?
- Had a fire?
- Had a party?
- Sold a farm?
- Been arrested?
- Come to town?
- Stolen a dog or his friend's wife?
- Committed suicide or murder.
- Fallen into a well?
- Inherited a legacy?

Had an aeroplane accident? Lost an auto? Sold or purchased a pedigreed animal?

That the publisher would like to know about it and would be glad to hear about it, that such items are news and that they would appreciate having the same telephoned the office. It further adds:

The newspaper is the best community asset there is. It is the thing that makes for the solidarity of its population; it advertises the town and its interests elsewhere; it boosts the town in a variety of ways and never stops. And then it provides news interest and entertainment for great numbers of people of the community.

If the people of the town care anything for greater and greater results of their property and interests through this medium of publicity, it is up to them to help the publisher make a constantly better paper.
