IN PRAISE OF THE APPLE

This is apple week set aside by proclamation of the governor for the stimulation of marketing the apple crop. Buy a box of apples, eat an apple a day, and keep doctor's bills away. A friend of the writer in Minnesota, who had raised a large family, told him that each fall he put in his cellar a dozen or more barrels of apples. His children were encouraged to eat them at all times, and he claimed this kept them in perfect health. It is perhaps then appropriate that apple week occurs during the health exposition in the Auditorium at Portland, though no mention is made of an apple exhibit in connection.

There is a romance about apples which none other fruit enjoys. Popular tradition asserts that the apple was the forbidden fruit in Eden. Mythology records the golden apples guarded by the Hesperides, to secure some of which was one of the twelve labors assigned to Hercules. Then in our own country who has not heard of Johnny Appleseed? who scattered apple-seeds as he peregrinated through from Pennsylvania to Illinois, and whose itineraries can be traced today from the apple trees which grew from the seeds he planted. To the farm housewife of an earlier age apples were most prominent in her bills of fare. Apple pie, apple sauce, apples roast, stewed or fried, apple cider, and in New York state before the Volstead act, apple jack.

Oregon apples have attained such perfection in size and color that Oregonians would turn up their noses with disdain at the crabs and russet apples which farmers in the prairie states were glad to get to put in their cellars for winter and spring use. But those who recall them will remember with what relish they ate them in pies or sauce along toward spring. Sometimes these would be put up in so-called molasses and by spring would be working a little which made the product all the more palatable, and imparted to it tonic qualities which alleviated that spring tired feeling.

The apple then is deservedly held in the highest estimation among the fruits. Others may be more fancy and finer flavored but none has such lasting and all round qualities as the apple. If a man could have only one barrel of fruit in his cellar for the winter, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred he would choose apples in preference to any other kind.

WHO WILL BE WHO?

By Wednesday night the agony will be over and we shall know who is who of those running for office. The interest in this election, overwhelmingly centers around the governorship and the education bill. As to the former no prediction can be made with any certainty. If Walter Pierce has persuaded the bulk of the voters that his election will mean creature of moods, and subject to fits of deep depression. This is no doubt true; as for years he suffered at times intensely from a disease in one of his ears, that no doubt accounted for much of his eccentricity. His children are opposed to the match though they were willing it was reported he should marry the ex-queen of Wurtemberg, who is sixty years old. As the bride of his choice is only 37, it is evident they fear the possibility of other heirs to share with them in their father's estate.

EX-KAISER TO WED

On Sunday William of Hohenzollern will take unto himself a wife for the second time. Will he think of the former occasion when as Prince of Prussia, he was married with the pomp and state benefitting the nuptials of an heir to the throne of Prussia and the great German empire? Then all the crowned heads of Europe were present or were represented. But now only a few personal friends and close relatives will attend. It is reported that his late wife expressed a wish that he should remarry, as she knew he needed the sympathy of a loving wife, as he is a

Candidates for Governor

When a candidate for public office makes a campaign promising what he will do if elected, it is fitting and proper that the voter examine the public records to ascertain whether or not the candidate's record squares with his campaign promises. In the present campaign Candidate Pierce professes to be the apostle of lower taxes.

Mr. Pierce's Record

1. Of the $9,376,000 of state taxes for 1922, Mr. Pierce specifically approved of $8,964,039. This is 92 per cent of the total. Mr. Pierce had no opportunity to vote on the other 8 per cent, as he was not a member of the legislature when it was up for vote.
2. He voted for 97 per cent of all tax appropriation bills of the 1919 session of the legislature, and for all the appropriation bills of the special session of 1920.
3. The State Highway Commission now works without pay. Mr. Pierce introduced a bill to pay the commissioners $12,000 a year.
4. He voted to submit a bond issue of $400,000 for a new penitentiary. Governor Olcott has repaired the old one with convict labor at no tax expense.
5. Mr. Pierce claims he wishes to relieve real estate of the tax burden; yet he is the author of a bill providing for the legislature which would exempt from all taxation moneys, notes, credits and accounts.
6. In the last few years he voted for 185 salary increases.
7. He voted against the bills to consolidate the state bureaus and commissions.
8. He introduced a bill providing for the most elaborate commission any state ever had. He specifically provided "to secure every citizen of Oregon an opportunity at all times to work for the state," and provided a $8,000 salary for the head of the commission. This bill was purely Socialistic.
9. In the 1917, 1919 and 1920 sessions of the legislature there were appropriation bills introduced totaling $10,552,000. Of these Senator Pierce voted for $10,075,000.

Measured by every standard, Mr. Pierce is the most consistent little tax booster the state of Oregon ever had.

Mr. Olcott's Record

1. He introduced a change in the state secretary's report which has saved the state many thousands of dollars since 1912.
2. His renovation of the penitentiary saved the state nearly half a million dollars.
3. He secured funds for a training school building for the Boys' Institute without a single dollar or additional taxes.
4. He is the originator of the Oregon Blue Sky Law, which saves the Oregon people millions of dollars annually.
5. He was responsible for the stopping of junketing trips by state officials at state expense.
6. He secured the passage of a budget law effecting large economies in the state government, which could not otherwise be accomplished.
7. The change in the State Sessions Law, recommended by him, saves the state $10,000 a year.
8. He has been universally commended for the excellence of his official appointments.
9. He is responsible for changes in the administration of the state farms, which this year brought returns of $491,000 into the state.
10. He has shown himself, by his acts, a friend of the ex-service men, has warmly supported the bonus measure, and has administered the law in the interest of the ex-service men with honesty and efficiency.
11. He has taken the first real constructive step in the equalization of the state tax situation by the appointment of a committee of experts to investigate and report to the legislature the entire scope of the tax problem in this state, thus assuring that any changes to be made will be made along sane, conservative and constructive lines, which give far more promise of securing results than demagogic bawling and idle campaign promises such as are being made by the non-partisan candidate of the Democratic party, especially in the light of his record as the champion tax producer of the state of Oregon.
