DID AWAY WITH LONG CLIMB

Ingenious Entrance Made Through Hill into the Southwest Museum at Los Angeles, Calif.

Something unique has been accomplished in the completion of the entrance to the Southwest museum in Los Angeles. The building is situated upon a high hill and up to the present year it has been necessary for pedestrians to make a long and laborious climb up the hill to reach the main entrance.

Entrance Made Easy.

Now, however, the climb has been obliterated by an artistic as well as practical improvement. A tunnel, two hundred and twenty-four feet long was bored into the hill and ended in a large octagonal waiting room, on one side of which is a twelve-passenger electric elevator of the automatic type. The elevator makes a climb of 108 feet, delivering the passenger into the main hall of the museum.—From the Independent.

Shattered Homes was smoking his fourth ounce of strong tobacco since breakfast. Suddenly the cut-glass inkwell on his desk quivered and danced, and the great detective gazed earnestly into it. Then he pressed an electric button in the arm of his chair, and his mysterious Chinese servant appeared in the doorway.

LITTLE CALL FOR DEDUCTION

Visitor's Request Made All Things Clear to the Mind of the Monarch of Detectives.

Shattered Homes was smoking his fourth ounce of strong tobacco since breakfast. Suddenly the cut-glass inkwell on his desk quivered and danced, and the great detective gazed earnestly into it.

"You called, Excellent One!" Shattered Homes nodded.

"A man is at the door," he explained. "He is partly bald, squints, and is very fond of dogs. Show him in!"

A minute later the man so minutely described by the great detective rushed into the room.

"You are the famous Shattered Homes! You must find her! You will find her!" he cried.

Shattered Homes wiped his fountain pen upon his favorite black cat.

"But tell me who she is!" he ordered.

"I want her back," sobbed the visitor. "She is my mother-in-law!"

Shattered Homes went to the telephone.

"Hallo! I want 0033, please. Is that Dollywood asylum? Good! Has one of your patients escaped? I thought so! Send a cab round to the house of Shattered Homes, will you?"

Then the great detective went out to lunch.—London Tit-Bits.

MARY ELLEN NOT IMPRESSED

Gorgeous Coat, Not Such a Wonderful Possession, in the Sight of One Small Girl.

Mrs. Blank's sister gave Mrs. Blank a red leather motor coat trimmed with gray fur and silver buttons, and lined with corduroy, and Mrs. Blank feels she must wear it. However, she has not acquired sufficient courage to appear in it outside the car. It is a perfectly gorgeous coat, but red leather is a bit startling, you know, and Mrs. Blank is properly modest.

She was coming down the stairs recently, buttoning the new coat preparatory to going out, when she saw the neighbor's child staring amazedly at her, simply devouring the brilliant wrap with her eyes. Mrs. Blank became slightly self-conscious under the persistent gaze, and said hurriedly, "haven't you seen my new coat before, Mary Ellen?"

"No'm."

"What do you think of it, dear?"

"It kinda looks like you got it for Christmas, and couldn't take it back." —Indianapolis News.
