Trap-Nested WHITE LEGHORNS Bred for Vigor and High Egg Production.

Our primary aim is to produce vigorous, husky chicks; healthy, rugged breeding stock, and first class hatching eggs. Hence, in many cases, our customers roll up bigger egg records than we do. But we hold our mature stock back as long as possible after the moult and bring them into laying as near the hatching season as possible. Thus are our customers assured of strong, rugged chicks and high quality hatching eggs.

Farm Reminders

Feeding and drinking vessels in the poultry establishment should be thoroughly cleaned daily.

One of the limiting factors of the poultry business is the disease problem. Chicks brooded in small flocks have a better chance to grow to maturity than under the more intensive methods of brooding.

Newly hatched chicks may be fed with good results during the first week three times daily on a chick food containing three pounds of cracked corn, three pounds of pinhead oatmeal or steel-cut oats, one pound of fine grit, and twice daily a mash composed of equal parts of bran shorts and corn meal mixed with eggs, or rolled oats with eggs. In addition supply sour milk or buttermilk to drink. Provide grit and charcoal in hoppers and give the chicks green feed once a day.
