Trap-Nested
WHITE LEGHORNS
Bred for Vigor and High Egg Production.

Our primary aim is to produce vigorous, husky chicks; healthy, rugged breeding stock, and first class hatching eggs. Hence, in many cases, our customers roll up bigger egg records than we do. But we hold our mature stock back as long as possible after the moult and bring them into laying as near the hatching season as possible. Thus are our customers assured of strong, rugged chicks and high quality hatching eggs.

THE OCTAGON ROOM

HOT WEATHER STORY

At a clerical gathering while enjoying the after dinner interim, the conversation turned on the subject of spirit manifestations. One of the clergy who had recently returned from a summer spent in England told the following story:

"The city of Riseholme is one of the most ancient in England, and has a most glorious minster, which crowns the summit of a steep hill, rising abruptly in the midst of fen country. I recall my first visit to the place, as the train ran around the base of the hill, just before entering the station. I happened to look up, and was most impressed by the sight of the cathedral towering over my head. I said to myself, 'I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord.'"

"The city itself is most interesting and in the Close surrounding the Minster are the official residences of the Cathedral clergy. Some of these are almost ancient. The Bishop's palace though modern, stands in the same grounds, as the ruins of its predecessor, which dates back almost as far as the Cathedral. The Chancery is perhaps the oldest of these houses, for though modernized and rebuilt, much of the original structure has been retained. It is a long, rather low building, flush with the pavement in front, but having a spacious garden, at the back, enclosed with a high stone wall, in which are remains of Roman origin, for Riseholme at one time was a Roman camp.

"The front of the house is plain, but possessing a most exquisite example of an oriel window, which immediately attracts the attention. This is in the drawing-room, a long room panelled in ancient oak. It opens into a corridor, which runs the whole length of the house, on the opposite side of which are bedrooms. Adjoining the drawing room is the music room, which is separated from the former by sliding doors, so that the two rooms can be thrown into one. The corridor at its north end, opens into a very peculiar room, being octagonal in shape and beautifully panelled in oak, both on its walls and ceiling. There is a story in connection with it, which is most interesting, for until a few years ago, no one knew that there was such a room.

"Many queer reports were current about the house, which gave it reputation of being haunted. Bells were rung at night, footfalls sounded along the passages, startling the occupants of the bedrooms. A person mounting the winding stairway from the basement to the floor above, would often hear the rustle as of a silk dress ahead. The wife of the former chancellor used to relate the following incidents:

"I was laid up one Sunday with a very severe cold, so did not go to church. I was lying on the sofa in the drawing room dressed in a silk wrapper, when, about noon, the cook, who with a maid, were the only others in the house, rushed in exclaiming, 'Why, mistress, how could you be so foolish as to go down those drafty stairs to the kitchen hall? You will surely catch your death of cold!' I replied, 'Why, what do you mean? I have not left the room since eleven o'clock.' 'Why ma'am, Anne and I both heard you coming down the steps as we were in the kitchen, then you turned back, and I followed you up, and could hear distinctly the rustle of your dress.'"

"Another time, my husband was taken ill during the service, and so came home; as he opened the front door he heard the rustle of silk. "So the ghost was supposed to be that of a lady, but, while heard, had never been seen. Who she was, no one knew. But the footfalls along the passages were too heavy for those of a woman.

"Various explanations were suggested; the rustle was said to be the wind whistling along the passages; rats in the walls might be the cause of other noises and so on. But not everything could thus be accounted for, as for instance, a person alone in the library would often become conscious of a presence in the room, though there was no one visible.

"The chancellor being the legal advisor to the Bishop, dean and Cathedral chapter, looked after the diocesan properties, a few years ago, important litigation was being carried on, involving lands and endowments of the Cathedral. Certain papers and deeds were missing, which it was highly necessary to produce. During the commonwealth period, the Cathedral archives had been looted, and many old title deeds and records, destroyed or lost. It was hoped that those wanted might be found. The Chancellor instituted a vigorous search but to no avail.

"One night he was sitting up late in the library, looking through some old volumes and records, to see if he could discover a clue. It must have been nearly midnight, when he happened to look up, for the feeling came over him, that he was not alone. As he did so, he perceived a man standing by a bookcase at the corner of the room at his back, where some old folios were stored. The man or figure was evidently an ecclesiastic, being dressed in a silk cassock and doctor's gown, and wearing a Canterbury cap. The Chancellor recognized a resemblance to the portrait of a predecessor, who had held office during the latter part of the reign of Charles I.

"As he gazed at the figure, it put its hands on a certain volume, beckoned to Chancellor and then disappeared. The Chancellor though startled, was not frightened, and went to the shelf and took down the volume. As he opened it, a paper fell out, on which was the rough plan of the second floor

Labor Day Celebration

The executive committee meeting at Woodle and Wooster's office was called to order Monday evening by the chairman, G. E. Lawrence. H. C. Stephens reported having procured a speaker for the day, the Hon. Milton A. Miller, former collector of internal revenue, and democratic aspirant for the U. S. senate. He also stated having seen E. L. Myers of Eagle Creek, who promised to try to get the use of the park for the celebration, from the railroad company.

S. E. Wooster reported having made arrangements with Swift & Co. of Portland to roast the meat for the barbecue.

As the old flagpole had been cut down it was decided to obtain a new one.

C. S. Allen reported he was trying to get the different lodges to take part in the parade.

It was decided to obtain a home band if possible, and the committee offered to buy what music was needed and help in other expenses in getting some help. Roy Wilcox stated he would go ahead and advertise the celebration, and the chair appointed Thomas Morton to assist him.

The tickets for voting for the queen are at the Woodle-Wooster office, and the different committees can begin to vote for their respective candidates.

As B. O. Tunnell of Currinsville could not act on the committee, Wilbur Wade was appointed in his stead.

The committee will meet again next Monday night at the same place.

O. A. C. Notes

Oregon prune driers who used the recirculating air system developed by E. H. Wiegand of the experimental station, increased the capacity of their natural draft plants almost 100 per cent, at little more than one-third the cost of a new drier, and greatly improved the quality of their dried prunes.

The cost of drying by the recirculating air system last year is shown by accurate figures to have run from 1.2 to 1.6 cents per pound, while the cost in the common natural draft driers ranged from 2 1-2 to 3 1-2 cents per pound.

Rebekahs Take Notice

At the next regular meeting of the Rebekah lodge, Aug. 8, the children will be entertained. All Rebekahs' children are invited. This is an annual custom of this order.

Again We Defeat Oswego

YES, WE HAVE NO PITCHERS TODAY. So sang Oswego last Sunday as our local wafflers were gathering fifteen hits off Wentworth, netting seven runs, five of which were earned. A two bagger and two errors gave Oswego their only tally, in the third inning.

Glancing over the score sheet one is inclined to make the statement that Jack Smith and Ray Lovelace played the visitors. Jack was in great form and gave Oswego three hits and struck out five. That is about all one could expect from one man, but it did not quite satisfy Jack, who quite calmly fattened his batting average by garnering three doubles out of four times up. Ray Lovelace, in center, played in big league, style, three of his six chances being spectacular, bringing the fans to their feet in wild enthusiasm, and that is going some, as the bugs who attend the games regularly are so sure that everything that has gone into his territory has dropped in a well that it requires a "freak stunt" on his part to get him any applause from the stands.

The entire team played good, snappy ball and the Oswego bunch never did have a look in, despite the fact that they brot their chief of police along, which said official is sure a good roofer, and may be a dandy chief of police, but shows very poor judgment in betting. Nevertheless we like the old gentleman. He shows himself to be a good sportsman and is certainly loyal to his local team. Guy King was rather nasty with the stick and came out of the fray with a double and two singles, besides stealing third twice. One of his steals was amusing as Guy simply sauntered from second to third, and by the time Oswego realized that he was a "walking baserunner," Guy was there.

Bill Boland did NOT catch a foul fly—there was no such animal last Sunday.

BORING COMING SUNDAY

Just think, Boring next Sunday, and you know what that means. The snappiest team in the league—and they beat us the last time they were here. With Hoffmeister in good form, they will give our local players a run for their money. It sure should be a HUMBINGER, and any of you fans who miss it are to be pitied. There is an intense rivalry over this game as Estacada has a two to one record against Boring and they are determined to even it up with us this trip. Anything can be expected this time from a cock fight to a battle royal.

Why Do Girls Leave Home?

Because: 1—Parents are too cruel to their children; 2—of the lure of the big city; 3—of shattered romances and town scandal; 4—they leave in answer to fake matrimonial advertisements; 5—the search for romance and fine clothes is irresistible.

Thus Anna Q. Nilsson, the motion picture star, in no uncertain words expounded her reasons why over 65,000 girls desert the hearthstone every year. The girl problem has baffled the best known authorities, and although from time to time many preventatives have been evolved for the benefit of the young women, the disappearances yearly continue to be appalling.—At the Favorite theatre tonight and Friday night.

DEPUTIES LOCATE STILL AND BOOZE

Last Friday on information furnished by deputy sheriff, D. M. Marshall, Frank Smith or as he has been known, Fred Brault, who was living on the W. W. Christensen place at Springwater, was arrested by deputy sheriff H. H. Hughes, as he was driving through Clackamas station. He had in his truck 19 gallon jugs and 85 pint bottles of moonshine. His wife and child were riding with him, but they were released while Smith was put in jail until he furnished a $400 cash bail.

Later deputies Hughes and Marshall having obtained a search warrant, entered the house on the Christensen place, where they found upstairs, a still capable of running about 50 gallons of moonshine a day, and equipped with three Manning burners and high pressure tank. 360 gallons of mash, and 5 gallons of the finished product were also discovered. As a consequence Smith was rearrested and his bail increased to $2,000 which he was unable to furnish, so was put in jail.

It was ascertained that Christensen had leased the farm to Harvey Jones an automobile mechanic of Portland, and Smith is said to be his brother-in-law.

UPPER EAGLE CREEK

Seven from this neighborhood attended chautauqua to hear Billy Sunday the last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Douglass spent Sunday afternoon at The Oaks.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Woodle and Mrs. Malcolm Woodle and daughters were up this way Sunday. They came to visit with Mr. and Mrs. Ray Woodle but did not find them at home.

Mrs. Ed. Douglass was a Portland visitor the first of the week.

Mrs. Sackow and sons, Mrs. Schrader, Miss Josie Fischer and Mrs. Myrtle Haley were calling on the latter's mother, Mrs. Fred Hoffmeister, last Friday afternoon.

Child Dies Suddenly

Frances M. Paulsen the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Paulsen of Hermiston, died suddenly of heart failure Friday, July 27, aged 11 years. She was playing when the attack came on and died in about fifteen minutes afterwards. The funeral services were at Miller & Tracy's chapel in Portland, Tuesday at 1 p. m. with interment in Mt. Scott cemetery. Mr. and Mrs. F. Harkenrider of Estacada are her grandparents. The heartfelt sympathy of their many friends in this vicinity goes out to bereaved family.

Deal Not Completed

A report has been in circulation that the Estacada hotel had been sold by the P. R. L. & P. Co. Manager Cary states that negotiations to that effect have been carried on for the past month, but the deal has not yet been closed.
