BRETHREN, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such a one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted.—Galatians 6:1.

THE END CROWNS THE WORK

The passing of Woodrow Wilson was one befitting his life. Struck down in the path of duty, he lingered, struggling heroically against overwhelming physical odds. Most decidedly he can be reckoned as a martyr to his honest convictions, for he would not palter with them to obtain relief from harsh criticism or to gain favor. Whether he was right or wrong in his unyieldingness, he ought to be honored in that he would not sacrifice principle to popularity.

"The path of duty was the way to glory;" so sang a great poet.

"He that walks it, only thirsting For the right, and learns to deaden

Love of self, before his journey closes, He shall find the stubborn thistle bursting,

Into glossy purples, which out-redden All voluptuous garden roses."

The above lines apply singularly to Woodrow Wilson. For of late years his path was strewn with stubborn thistles of harsh criticism, invective and scorn. But time was working changes in sentiment, and the thistles, while he lay prone, burst into brilliant purple of sincere and honorable tributes paid by friends and opponents to his intrinsic worth.

A phrase maker of no mean order, his simple declaration, "I am ready," as he recognized the coming of the inevitable end, probably will live while others which attracted attention at the time, will be forgotten. There is something inspiring in the words, as those of one who was facing the great adventure in the confidence of a certain faith, and the conviction of duty well done.

In the great cathedral which crowns the height of one of London's hills, a monument stands to one of whom it is recorded that he "tried to do his duty." Certainly no man could wish for a nobler tribute, and this can be ungrudgingly accorded to Woodrow Wilson. And in so doing, he set his face like a flint, precedents might be smashed, friends estranged, but he unflinchingly pursued his way. Time may yet vindicate him more fully on the main issues. In fact it will be manifested that it was in minor details mostly that he failed, and this was due to the natural limitations of a man of his temperament, rather than pure stubbornness, as opponents claimed.

But whatever his shortcomings, they will be forgotten while his true worth will be increasingly appreciated. Finis coronat opus, the end crowns the work, and in that more abundant life into which he has entered, "he shall see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied."

"The dark crowd moves, and there are sobs and tears; The black earth yawns: the mortal disappears: Ashes to ashes, dust to dust; He is gone, who seemed so great. —Gone, but nothing can bereave him

Of the force he made his own Being here, and we believe him Something far advanced in State, And that he wears a truer crown Than any wreath that man can weave him.

In the vast cathedral leave him, God accept him, Christ receive him."

EARLY CLOSING

It is a good move on the part of our merchants to close at six o'clock every evening of the week days except Saturdays, and all day Sunday. The public should accommodate themselves to the change without grumbling. Merchants, like the rest of us are in need of recreation and rest, and leisure to spend at home with their families. Besides it is probable that the late evenings' trade is not sufficient to pay them for the extra expense of keeping open. It has been purely for the convenience of the public that they have done so.

The presidential boom of Wm. G. McAdoo is punctured, apparently beyond repair. Presidential candidates, like Caesar's wife, must be beyond suspicion, and with clean hands. Unfortunately for Mr. McAdoo there was an odor of oil about his which is repelling to the electorate. Not that he is to be blamed for this condition, but it puts him out of the running. Under present conditions it would eliminate any man, even though his legal ability was fully worth the enormous fees which the oil interests are said to have paid as retainers to Mr. McAdoo.

Dan Newman is again working for his aunt, Miss Sturgeon, in the Estacada Pharmacy.

A Good Selection

Edward Shearer of Springwater, farmer and poultry fancier and expert, also a member of the grange, has been approached by friends with the view of persuading him to run for the legislature. Mr. Shearer informs us that he has not yet rendered his decision. If he runs it will be on the republican ticket, and will make a strong candidate. For representative he would make an excellent choice in a community whose interests are predominantly agricultural. We heartily commend him to the serious consideration of the voters of the district as a man worth considering.

The Gem theatre was crowded last Saturday night to see "What Wives Want?" We hope the Benedicts and would be Benedicts present took notice and applied the lesson to heart.

The flags on the the city flag-staff and on the school house were placed at half mast Monday in respect to the memory of late former president, Woodrow Wilson.

Laundry Sold

Mrs. Della Morrison who has been running the City Laundry for some weeks past, has bought the plant of the Estacada Laundry and leased the building, which is the old cheese factory, of W. F. Cary. The plant of the former City Laundry was owned by Mrs. Tom Martin, who moved to Aberdeen, Wash., and it has been shipped to her at that city. Whalen & Whalen have been managing the Estacada Laundry for the past month. Mrs. Morrison will have an announcement later.

Have you filed your federal income tax return? Better do so before March 15 or you will be liable to heavy penalties.

Forecasting A Tremendous Spring Demand

739,626

more Ford cars and trucks were produced last year than the previous year, an increase of over 50 per cent.

In spite of this tremendous increase in production, it was impossible to meet delivery requirements during the spring and summer months when orders for 350,000 Ford Cars and Trucks could not be filled.

This year winter buying for immediate delivery has been more active than ever before—and in addition 200,000 orders have already been booked through the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan for spring delivery.

These facts clearly indicate that the demand during this spring and summer will be far greater than ever, and that orders should be placed immediately with Ford Dealers as a means of protection against delay in securing your Ford Car or Truck or Fordson Tractor.
