An Evening of Fun

The Darktown minstrels have come and gone, and proved that the Brothers' Aid society of the Methodist church, certainly made no mistake when it engaged this aggregation of colored talent. The high school auditorium was well filled with an expectant audience when the curtain rose, showing the interest which had been aroused by previous advertising. The receipts totalled the gratifying sum of $96.30. We are creditably informed that these dusky nightingales are not professionals, but gifted amateurs who devote their services to promoting uplifting agencies in general and the M. E. church in particular. In every day life they occupy prominent positions in financial, mercantile, ministerial, horticultural and railroad circles.

The program opened with a skit entitled "The Embalming of Ebenezer," which convulsed the audience. The remainder of the numbers included favorite Southern plantation melodies as "Dixie," "Tennessee," "Swanee River," and the like. Then there were numerous jokes and take offs, both ancient and modern, a flight of oratory on "The Coward," which hit the stars, and a profound discourse on "Education," which plumbed the depths and should be repeated for the benefit of the school board and faculty. The only criticism we would make, is that there should have been a clog dance, such as the gentlemen who took the roles of the embalmed and embalmer in the opening piece, are well able to execute. This would have capped the climax.
