OREGON NEWS ITEMS OF SPECIAL INTEREST

The public service commission, in an order handed down, designated the boundaries within which the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph company and the Multnomah & Clackamas Mutual Telephone company may make future extensions. The order was necessary, it was said, because of overlapping service.

The work of auditing the books and records in the state treasury department has started under the direction of A. J. Tourtellotte, Portland accountant, and a representative of the concern that provided surety protection for the previous administration. It was said that two weeks will be required to complete the audit.

The North Coast Power company, operating at Hillsboro and Rainier, had operating income aggregating $190,075.59 during 1923, according to the annual report of the corporation filed with the public service commission. Operating revenues of the company totaled $612,231.18, while operating expenses were $378,009.13.

Oregon pensions have been granted as follows: Charles N. Pierce, Portland, $12; Catherine Marshay, Eugene, $30; James P. Baker, Bend, $12; Charles J. Redfield, Marshfield, $15; Charles H. Wood, Dorena, $15; Harry Riley, Portland, $12; Mollie Moyer, Milwaukie, $20; Anna M. Junk, $30; Isabel S. Webb, Roseburg, $30.

In compliance with a move which was alleged to have the support of practically all of the more important lumber operators in the Pacific northwest, the Charles K. Spaulding Logging company, which has a number of plants in the state, reduced its output starting April 1 by substituting two six-hour working shifts for the two eight-hour shifts formerly in effect.

There were three fatalities in Oregon due to industrial accidents during the week ending March 27, according to a report prepared by the state industrial accident commission. The victims were: William Hayman, Knappa, logger; Sam Strick, Reedsport, rockman, and James Albert Dunn, Baker, hooker. A total of 594 accidents were reported during the week.

I. H. VanWinkle, attorney-general, has sent to the secretary of state a legal opinion in which he held that a state treasurer is to be elected in Oregon this year. The opinion was sought by Secretary of State Koser. The attorney-general has held that the term of Jefferson Myers as state treasurer expires January 1 of next year, and not in the year 1927, as indicated in the commission issued by Governor Pierce.

After directing the calling for bids on road work in half a dozen counties and awarding a couple of contracts, the highway commission adjourned its meeting in Portland to meet again April 29. The most important road job in prospect is the grading of a section of the Roosevelt coast highway from Brighton to Jetty creek, in Tillamook county, which will permit free flow of beach traffic from Clatsop county to the Lincoln county line.

Because of reports received in Salem that the foot and mouth disease again has infected a number of districts in California, the state livestock sanitary board caused Governor Pierce to issue a proclamation placing additional restrictions on the shipment of live stock and other commodities into Oregon, and providing for the disinfection of sheep shearers and other persons who, because of the character of their employment, might be carriers of the disease.

Weather conditions are normal in the Crater lake region. Because of recent snow storms a shortage of water for irrigation and other purposes which had been feared for the coming summer is not now probable according to Colonel C. G. Thompson superintendent of Crater lake national park. Colonel Thompson says storms during the last ten days have added to the depth of snow in the higher altitudes, and at present there is ten feet of snow at the rim of the lake.

Even though the courts should declare unconstitutional the state income tax law enacted by the last legislature, those who have paid the tax may lose their money, as there is no way in which they can recover from the state, is the intimation given out at the attorney-general's office in Salem. It was pointed out, however, that if a person affected by the law pays his tax under protest and obtains a formal receipt from the state tax commission he probably would be in a position to recover the amount of his paid.

Farm Reminders

With pasture season coming on there is often a desire to discontinue feeding grain to the cows to a great extent if not entirely. Cows well fed during the winter, says N. C. Jamison, college extension dairyman, will milk well for a short time with but little change in the amount of milk produced although the grain ration has been decreased. When the stored surplus of food material has been "milked off" the cows reduce in flesh, especially when they feed on "washy" early pastures. A gradual change from grain to pasture tends to prevent the loss of flesh. After the pastures have become strong less grain is required.

Lettuce acreage in Oregon will probably be smaller this year than last. At least there will be no outstanding increase as has been the case the past few years. Many sections are reporting smaller plantings than last year because prices last year did not come up to expectations.

SCENES IN STILL LIFE AND LAW SUPREMACY

The pictures which were shown Friday night when Ray E. Close, assistant superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Oregon, addressed the large audience assembled in the high school auditorium, should certainly have had a deterrent effect on the use of moonshine. But those who are addicted to that kind of brew, were in all probability not there. When in one picture, a rat and a frog, both in the last stages, not of evolution, but of dissolution, were fished out of the mash, we recalled an incident in Denver several years ago. A drop of the city water was being shown under a microscope which revealed a number of wormlike germs cavorting around in it. Among those who stepped up to view the sight was a gentleman with a rubicund nose. He started back in horror asserting emphatically that he would never drink it again. So after seeing that picture, we thought that the respectable citizen who was shown in another picture buying a bottle of the stuff, would notify his bootlegger that hereafter he would require a certificate in accordance with the pure food and drug act.

It is admitted that the prohibition law is difficult of enforcement, and violated by people who otherwise are law abiding citizens. That this should be the case constitutes an interesting problem in psychology and morals. It is all very well to denounce their action, but denunciation will not do much to improve the situation. If we want law respected and obeyed, as law, whether it is liked or not, we must begin to train up a people imbued with this sentiment. This is not done. The reform must start in the home with the child who is the father of the man. Reverence for and obedience to the law, is largely a matter of training and habit. "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it."

For Better Roads

"The Road to Happiness" a motion picture designed to promote interest in better highways has just been completed at the Ford Motion Picture Laboratory. It was produced in conjunction with the Bureau of Public Roads U. S. Department of Agriculture the Highway Educational Board, and the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce and carries their endorsement.

President Coolidge personally appeared in one of the scenes, and has expressed his approval of the picture. He is shown presenting a scholarship certificate to "Bob Preston," the farm boy hero of the story who is winner of a prize essay contest on better roads. The scene was taken on the White House grounds and with the President.

Principal settings of the film were taken around Fairfax, Va., fifteen miles out of Washington, and the chief characters were portrayed by people residing in that vicinity.

Copies of the film are being sent to branches of the Ford Motor Company in the U. S. and the picture will be shown generally. Highway commissioners, county engineers, road officials, schools and all interested in the promotion of improved highways may obtain the use of the film free of charge.
