LAND CLASSIFICATIONS, FARM APPRAISALS, TAUGHT

Assessors, Realtors and Security Appraisers, as Well as Farmers, Benefit by course.

A farm appraisal and land classification course of interest to assessors, realtors, federal and joint stock land bank operators, investment bankers, appraisers for the state and for security companies, and to prospective settlers and land owners will be given at the college February 2 to 7.

Detail soil surveys of 80 per cent of the Willamette valley will be available for this course for the first time. Other new features will be lectures on "Property in Water Rights in Relation to Land Values" and "Tax Distribution in Relation to Land Values." One round table meeting will be devoted to "Orderly Methods of Land Settlement."

Training to identify soil types in the field and to make a reasonable appraisal of agricultural land for various types of farming is the aim of the course.

Beekeepers are urged to see that the entrance s in the late winter are free of dead bees and rubbish so that bees can have free flight on sunny days. By lifting the back end of the hives the beekeeper is able to determine by weight the amount of stores the bees have.

Order the equipment now and have it ready for use when the spring rush starts, says H. A. Scudder, Oregon bee man and bee specialist at the state college. There is much to do, and the one that has the supers on at the proper time gets the most honey.

CLACKAMAS COUNTY SOIL SURVEY NOW READY

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis.—The soil survey report of Clackamas county is in the hands of the printer and will be available for distribution in a few weeks. The report describes each soil type in the county and shows on a colored map the location and extent of these types. A description of the climate and geology of the area and an account of the agricultural development of the county is included in the report.

The soil work of the station includes the making of detailed surveys of the land which can be cultivated in the state. More than five million acres have been mapped. Official samples of each soil type are taken for analysis by modern methods. On account of this systematic work, it is impossible to make complete analysis for individuals or samples indiscriminately taken nad sent in.

The soils department of the experiment station will examine samples if taken according to directions, which are supplied on request, and will identify the type and advise as to its general composition and management and whether the sample is representative of the type as mapped.

Simple tests to determine lime requirements will be made if desired. The soil department is always glad to learn of any serious soil problem. If a field examination by a soil specialist is needed or if special investigation by station workers seem necessary, these helps can be secured as far as funds will permit

HIGHER FLOUR PRICES IS DUE TO GRAIN SHORTAGE

President of Sperry Flour Co. Quotes Government Bulletin in Support of Statement

San Francisco, Feb. 2, 1925.—The increased price of flour is directly due to a genuine shortage in bread grains, according to W. H. Joyce, president of the Sperry Flour Co., and a former member of the Farm Loan Board at Washington, D. C.

In support of his statement, Joyce called attention to a bulletin issued January 6, 1925, by the Department of Agriculture, which states that farmers are getting a good price for wheat for the first time in four years because of the inevitable law of supply and demand.
The bulletin, according to Joyce, demonstrates that housewives are paying higher prices for flour and bakery products, not because of profiteering on the part of grocers, bakers or milling firms, but because of a real shortage of wheat.

The outstanding facts of the bulletin as quoted by Joyce are:
The acreage planted to wheat in North America was 10 to 12 per cent less than that for 1923.

The United States' 1924 wheat crop was 25,000,000 bushels below the five-year average, and only 70,000,000 bushels over the small crop of 1923.

Canada's export crop in 1923 totaled 375,000,000 bushels; last year it declined to 175,000,000 bushels.

From July 1 to December 31, 1923, the United States exported only 81,000,000 bushels of wheat, while during the same period last year 197,000,000 bushels were exported.

"The government's bulletin points out that these facts show unmistakably the reasons for the prevailing price of wheat," Joyce declared.
"It also states that the conjunction of circumstances responsible for it is one that is unlikely to occur on the average more than once in many years, and therefore, does not warrant the expectation of continued high prices in future years."

OREGON POULTRY WORK SUBJECT OF TRAINING

Oregon's rapidly developing poultry industry has created a demand for fuller knowledge along poultry lines. To meet this demand the college is offering poultry short courses from February 2 to March 14. The courses aim to help those attending to meet the problems of the practical poultryman and to train the student in the methods and practices that make for successful poultry keeping.

Practical work on the college plant will be given. One day of each week will be devoted to visiting leading poultry farms of the state at Canby, Junction City, Lebanon and Corvallis. It is planned to organize the short course students into a club for discussion of live poultry problems. Members of the college staff will also take part in these discussions.

The student may hatch and brood his own chicks to take home with him in the course on incubation and brooding. Actual feeding of a flock as well as a study of the common poultry feeds and the mixing and balancing of rations will be given in the course in feeds and feeding.

POULTRY BUSINESS HURT BY FOWL PLAGUE PANIC

Assurance Sent Growers That State Regulations Do Not AFFECT Movement of Day-Old Chicks

That the shipping of day-old chicks across state lines is not affected by the quarantine and embargo regulations against the fowl plague is the assurance to Oregon poultry breeders given by the state college experiment station.

The fowl pest has caused consideration and actual loss in midwestern states and some states further east, says Dr. B. T. Simms, head of the veterinary medicine department, but has not appeared in any state as far west as the Rocky mountains so far as known. Unfounded reports tend to throw a panic into some poultry growers and damage the breeders correspondingly.

Dr. L. F. Felton, state veterinarian of Washington, has wired Dr.
Simms that the regulations made by that state do not apply to day-old chicks. The same may be said of the California regulations, and as far as known, of those of Idaho and other states.

Continued success in Oregon honey production is not an accident, says the experiment station. It is a combination of good bees, good beekeeping, good equipment, and a good location.

Eliminate European foulbrood in Oregon and cross bees by replacing all inferior queens with good Italian queens.. This is one of the biggest step toward success, says the experiment station.

LEGION TO GIVE SHOW

tacada and will be shown as part of the American Legion's Americanization program.

survivors of the famous battle of the 77th division in action in the War.

ADDRESSES E. C. C. AT REGULAR MEETING

Due to other attractions last Friday night, the attendance at the Eastern Clackamas Community Club was considerably reduced in size.

The meeting was called to order about 8:30 p. m., by the president, A. G. Ames, in the high school auditorium and the regular monthly business was taken up at that time.

Mrs. H. C. Stephens, chairman of the road sign committee, reported that the three members of her committee had visited County Judge Cross and had outlined the plan as proposed by the Community Club for marking the roads in this part of Clackamas County. The fund for that purpose had been exhausted and plans were under consideration to take care of the necessary markers for the highways and roads of the county at a later date.

The subject for a rest room for the city was next taken up and J.
M. Moore was called upon to outline the plan as he had proposed it to some of the members. In discussing this he suggested that several organizations go together to secure the necessary furnishings and that a suitable building could be obtained for this purpose at a reasonable cost. In this manner these organizations could have a place where the regular business could be easily transacted and the records kept. Mr. Stephens was called and stated that such a plan might be worked out. The matter was left for a discussion at the next regular meeting.

Mr. Delphine of Barton entertained those present with a number of excellent violin selections. He was accompanied on the piano by Miss Corrine Trullinger.

Arthur Foster, field representative of the Land Settlement department of the Portland Chamber of commerce spoke on the "Aim of the State Wide Development Move-

Mr. Foster stated how the business men of Multnomah county had come to the rescue of the irrigation projects in Eastern Oregon. He discussed the advertising campaign as used in this state in the past and of the efforts put forth to "place the right man in the right place." He particularly stressed the work done in the auto camps in Portland last year and told of the plans that were to be used this season to induce tourists to "see Oregon while passing through the state", suggesting the possible side trips of real interest which could not be seen on a hurried trip.

"THE DAWN OF A TOMORROW"

"The Dawn of a Tomorrow," a new George Melford production for Paramount, featuring Jacqueline Logan, David Torrence and Raymond Griffith, will be shown at the Gem Theatre Saturday and Sunday nights, February 7 and 8.

The story, by Frances Hodgson Barnett, differs from all other successful plays that have been picturized in that it underlines the importance of one's intellectual attitude toward life, and the effect of things unseen and only thought.

Miss Logan's role as the London waif, Glad, who makes things come right by the strength of her 'wishin' and 'arskin' we regard as one of the greatest attainments of her phenomenal career. There is an inner force about her acting that radiates her impersonation and makes it both strong and winning. In the scene in which she repels the advances of a daring degenerate and forces him to do her will merely by 'arskin' and 'arskin' the Unknown Power she blindly believes in to compel him, she reaches the height of performance and grips her audience with genuine power. She has some very excellent assistance from Torrence and Griffith, the two other featured players, and from several members of the supporting cast, Alma Bennett and Guy Oliver in particular.

ATTENTION

A radio program will be given at the Methodist church this Thursday, evening at 7:30 o'clock for the benefit of the church. An admission fee of 25 cents and 10 cents will be charged. Messrs.
Sagner and Smith have very kindly agreed to put on the demonstration, using two machines, an Atwater Kent and a big Super Hete-rodyne. It
