THE CITY BEAUTIFUL

At this particular season of the year we hear much about ways and means of beautifying our city, community and homes. This is a wonderful idea to instill in the minds of both young and old for it not only enhances the surroundings of each and every individual if carried out but makes for a better and more inviting environment which will attract those who happen to journey this way in the seeking of a home.

Estacada, as well as other cities, has many needs for this scheme of beautifying her city. The Community Club and Band started a scheme whereby considerable interest could and should be aroused in making this community one of beauty and attractiveness in spite of various handicaps that may be overcome only by the hard and persistent labor of each and every citizen.

As we go on our way we hear much about this plan of planting flowers but the question generally arises as to how we may have beautiful flowers and lawns for the present water supply is not sufficient to keep them fresh and green during the drier months of the year. We agree that this is a problem but we also believe that some efforts are being expended to bring about some relief in this situation. But we do know this, that in spite of the shortage of water for irrigation purposes there is no excuse for any family to have a yard littered with all kinds of rubbish. This place can at least be kept clean and there is real beauty in cleanliness. If each and every one should look over their surrounding premises and determine that his or her particular one would be cleaned up and kept in that condition we feel that a big step in the beautifying of our city had already been taken.

The first time you happen out in your own yard take a careful look over the premises and condemn yourself as you would another for such an untidy and ill kept yard. Then resolve that now is the time to clean up those unsightly spots and we feel that you will soon see a great change in the city of Estacada.

OUTLOOK IS PROMISING FOR 1925 PRUNE PRICES

Offers for the 1925 prune crop should open at a very fair price, says C. J. Hurd, marketing specialist for the state college extension service. For the first time in several years no surplus will be carried over. Both the Oregon and California crops should be cleaned up shortly and since a large part of the 1924 crop has been sold for export, jobbers and retailers should enter the 1925 buying season with practically empty shelves.

Better economic conditions in Europe and prospects for continuous employment of labor in the United States are other factors that augur well for the prune grower, Mr. Hurd believes.

Oregon and Washington have a near monopoly of Italian prunes, but the variety has to compete with the petite prune produced in California. The Italian has an advantage over the petite in size with almost a monopoly on 20's, 30's and 35's. The state agricultural economic conference and later Willamette valley conferences urged Oregon growers to put forth a special effort to produce those large sizes.

"Keeping the orchard in good physical condition and using proper care in harvesting will go far toward supplying the large sizes and good quality needed if best prices are to be obtained," says Mr. Hurd. "Owing to the exceedingly dry season last year, some growers are reporting light blooming prospects, which should mean fewer prunes to the tree and consequently larger sizes."

"The recommendation of the state economic conference that no more prunes be planted should be rigidly adhered to, but every effort should be made to maintain the present orchards at maximum production."

Red and alsike clover planted with spring grain in Oregon is usually successful in seasons of fair summer rainfall, reports the experiment station. The best of the nurse crop for the clover is barley, and next best is wheat.

The small son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Kitching of Currinsville last week fell from a tree which resulted in the tearing loose of a ligament in his shoulder.
