The high school auditorium was unusually well filled last Friday night when the Men's Brotherhood of the M. E. Church staged "A Womanless Wedding." It would be a difficult matter to state which sustained his or "her" part best.

The vocal solos by Fred Horner of Dodge, the violin solos by Theo. Ahlberg and the piano numbers by Harry Grable were especially enjoyable as were the selections by the quartette composed of C. A. Dykeman, Ed. Linn, F. C. Leihamer and F. C. Bartholomew.

It is understood that over one hundred dollars was cleared at this entertainment which will be donated to the furnace fund of the M. E. Church.

VALUABLE BULLETIN FOR FARMERS OR HOME OWNERS

A valuable bulletin on vegetable gardening has been very recently prepared by Professor A. G. B. Bouquet of the Oregon Agricultural College. It is of particular value to the farmer or home owner rather than relating to vegetable (Commercial) production. It contains rather complete information concerning planning and planting the farm or home vegetable garden. This bulletin suggests varieties of all the common kinds of vegetables that do best under local conditions, with a very complete table showing distances, rate of planting, amount of seed per hundred feet of row, depth of planting and time of maturity. There is also included in the bulletin a list of publications on vegetable gardening, any of which may be had without cost through the office of the county agent, whose address is Oregon City.

The county agent's office is the local representative of the O. A. C. Extension Service and United States Department of Agriculture, being equipped to not only supply free bulletins on many different subjects but also provide information on many subjects relating to the agriculture and homes of the county. Walter A. Holt, County Agt.

FORD USED CAR PLAN

DETROIT, MICHIGAN, Apr. 20, 1925.--Much interest has centered during the last two weeks in the announcement of the Ford used car plan. This interest has been evidenced by both the public and the automotive industry generally, for it is the first move made by any large automobile concern toward the solution of the so-called used car problem.

Under the plan which is supervised by the company, all authorized Ford dealers place a guarantee upon used Ford cars sold by them, thus insuring to the purchaser satisfactory mechanical operation of the cars under ordinary driving conditions.

Reports received during the week country, it was said at the office of the Ford Motor Company in Detroit, indicate two things--greater buyer confidence on the part of the public and ageneral feeling among Ford dealers that the plan is certain to promote customer satisfaction.

Those reports it was said, are not based upon expressions from Ford dealers alone. They also include public reaction toward the plan as reflected through the vast dealer organization which, because of its extensiveness, is an excellent barometer of automobile marketing conditions.

Another feature of the report is the ready acceptance of the plan by the dealers themselves and their enthusiasm over it. They feel that the new arrangement, together with their own fitness of judging car values and facilities for reconditioning cars when that is necessary, places them in position to afford much better service to people in the market for used cars.

On the basis of the reports so far received the plan promises an effective solution for used car handling by Ford dealers and one in which the public will benefit.
