COUNCIL ADJOURNS UNTIL NEXT TUESDAY

The regular monthly meeting of the city council last Tuesday evening at the city hall was adjourned until Tuesday evening, August 18. Only one councilman was on hand and, lacking a quorum, no official business could be transacted.

About 30 persons were present for the meeting, representing the various churches, the W. C. T. U. and the Eastern Clackamas County Council of Religious Education, offering resolutions asking the council to take action prohibiting Sunday dances, rodeos and similar activities in the city of Estacada.

Owing to the absence of four of the councilmen no effort was made to present such resolutions, and it is understood the same group will attend the next meeting to bring the matter before this august body. Considerable interest is being aroused throughout the community by this much-discussed question and it is expected that many will attend to hear the arguments for and against the action proposed.

TIME FOR PEOPLE TO KNOW

Of all the great railroads listed on the New York stock exchange not one earned six per cent last year above claimed valuation; only eight earned above five per cent, for the main lines and all their subsidiaries which comprise their total investment. Two roads earned less than 1 per cent; ten others earned less than 3 per cent, ten earned between 3 and 4 per cent, and the others were between 4 and 5 per cent.

Taxes paid amounted to $340,000,000, while the stockholders received only $310,000,000. The striking fact disclosed by this showing is that the owners of the country's transportation system are getting nothing like an adequate return on their investment in them.

And this is the industry that has been wilfully misrepresented by political demagogues as guaranteed a profit by the federal government. The figures quoted ought to be convincing proof of the truth.

The sawmill now being installed by A. H. Hassell on the H. B. Snyder place in Dodge will be put into operation this week, it is understood. When the mill is in full operation it will have a capacity of 20,000 feet per day. The stand of timber to be

LOOK WELL AT THE WELL

Following is an article on typhoid written for the Oregon Tuberculosis Association by Dr. B. S. Horben of New York:

When we go to the country fair, whether by train or by auto, we would do well to be cautious, for it is the vacationist who is apt to come down with illness, a long sickness and an expensive one. Typhoid fever is spread by the human excreta (bowel and urinary discharges) and it is no wonder that it has been said that for every death from this disease someone should be hung.

Water from wells or streams or springs which drain territory contaminated by human beings is one of the most fertile sources of the disease; and the milk supply is readily contaminated. Hands of careless people and the foods under their touch pass along this vicious germ, the typhoid bacillus.

When you eat or drink the typhoid germs your digestive apparatus sends them into your intestinal tract, where they commence to play at mischief. In the walls of the intestines are structures which have to do with the digestive processes—little spots which have been named Peyor's Patches. When the typhoid bacillus gets into the neighborhood of these patches they start an inflammation in them.

The patches become red and swollen, and finally pale and gray as the inflammation progresses to pus formation. The tissue becomes dead, and finally sloughs or rots off, to leave an ulcer where the patch was. This ulcer may go so deep as to perforate the muscle wall, and even the peritoneum (the membrane covering the intestine) and if it goes through that membrane the serious complication of "peritonitis" may follow. Not only is there a leakage of the intestines out into the free spaces between the organs of the abdomen, but there may be dangerous hemorrhages as well. It is usually a fatal day for the patient when the patch becomes a hole.

Therefore, before you go to the country get a typhoid vaccination done by your doctor. Uncle Sam requires it for all his soldiers. While you are away, carefully consider your milk supply, and before tasting the water be suspicious. Look around at the tourist camp for a certificate of inspection which shows that the State Board of Health has inspected the premises and analyzed the water supply and found them safe. Over 300 Oregon camps already bear his sign. If in doubt, look for the certificate.

IT'S JUST A QUESTION OF GETTING A PIG TO MARKET

"There is enough coal in Siberia to keep the wheels of American industry turning for a million years." That in effect is what John F. Stevens, the noted Panama Canal engineer and builder of the Oregon Trunk railway, told the business men of Portland in a public address a short time ago.

He intimated, in other words, that the supply of coal in that vast empire was practically inexhaustible.

It seems too bad that this untold fuel wealth should be in Siberia and the great market for it should be 8,000 or 10,000 miles away, here in America. It is a problem of "getting the pig to market."

The coal is no good where it is, for American industry cannot be transported over to Siberia where the coal is, and nobody has a rational suggestion for moving the coal to the market on an economic basis; that is, at a price American industry could afford to pay for it.

This situation is very much like a good deal of the talk about the great undeveloped water powers in the United States. There are millions of horsepower of such latent energy, but nobody appears to have worked out a sensible plan for getting the energy delivered to the market. Electric energy can only be delivered over a limited distance at a cost that will make its utilization practicable.

For the most part, in the United States, the undeveloped water powers are located at remote places where there are no active or potential markets of sufficient magnitude to justify early and rapid development of this stored-up energy.

"Getting the pig to market" therefore applies just as well to a vast bulk of the undeveloped hydro-electric energy of the country as it does to the unmeasured deposits of coal in Siberia.

Anyone wishing any special kind of pie or cake at the W. C. T. U. Cooked Food sale to be held Saturday at the Estacada Pharmacy, call Mrs. A. S. Hassell.

POSTMASTER JOHNSON RECEIVES INJURY

Postmaster A. N. Johnson met with an accident last Sunday afternoon which resulted in a badly injured knee. In some manner he caught his foot on a nail in the sidewalk and was thrown heavily to the ground. He was unable to attend to his official duties as usual but directed much of the work while confined to his bed.

GOV. PIERCE AT COLTON

There will be a rally of the Clackamas County Council of Religious Education at Colton on Sunday, August 30. Last year there was a gathering of this sort at Canyon Creek Park, Colton, and there was a very large attendance.

This year it is expected that there will be a larger attendance. A program of unusual interest has been prepared. Many noted speakers will be present.

Dr. W. L. VanNay will have as his subject "Better Homes." Governor Walter M. Pierce will talk on "The Effect of Bible School and Church on Law Enforcement."

State Prohibition Commissioner Levens' address will be on the subject "The Greatest Obstacle to the Enforcement of Prohibition."

There will be other people of eminence in the line of religious education who will take part in the interesting program which will be rendered forenoon and afternoon of the day.

Special music will be one of the attractions and a feature which will add materially to the enjoyment of the occasion.—Molalla Pioneer.

Miss Bertha Zienert of South St. Paul, Minn., is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kist.

The Clackamas News is only one dollar and four bits a year.

PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL LIVESTOCK EXPOSITION

The premium list of the 18th annual Pacific International Livestock Exposition, which will be held at Portland, Oregon, October 31 to November 7, inclusive, has just been received at this office and carries a total premium from all sources of nearly $100,000.

This great livestock classic of Western America promises to be still better than any year before, and already entries of various sorts of livestock are promised from every part of the United States and Canada.

This splendid prize list is divided among the various departments about as follows: Dairy breeds, $13,500; beef breeds, $15,000; sheep and goats, $9,000; hogs, $3,750; poultry, $2,500; heavy draft horses and the light horse show, $15,000, by the Exposition proper, and from entry fees in these stake classes a total of $30,000, making this show the largest horse show in America, which distinction it held also in 1924. Fat stock classes, $5,000; boys and girls club work, $5,000; manufacturers and land products and grain show, $3,500; dairy products, $750; judging teams, $2,500, together with groupings of other smaller items which will bring the amount up to approximately $100,000.

There will be two special features this year in connection with the show: one the campaign to show "Truth in Meat" and the other one a dairy exhibition which shall feature cow testing work. The "Truth in Meat" campaign will bring before the people of this country very clearly indeed the importance of knowing meat—prime, medium and common, the idea being that the farmer shall receive a better price for his higher grade meat whereas the cheaper types will sell for less money. The consumer will receive the benefit of this proposition. In the dairy cow testing work a string of average farm cows will be seen giving about 4,000 pounds of milk a year; another string of purebreds will probably give an average of say 8,000 to 12,000 pounds, a very small average for a good string of well bred cattle. The cattle will be picked from the various five breeds so that people can have a good opportunity to see results from a good average herd of purebreds.

This wonderful building covers over 10 acres of ground and apparently will be filled to overflowing this year with breeding animals from all parts of the country, and those who expect to come should send in their entries early.

Boys' and girls' club work is considered one of the leading activities of our Exposition and will be more highly emphasized than ever this year.

Premium lists may be obtained by addressing O. M. Plummer, General Manager, 211 Northwestern Bank Building, Portland, Oregon. Entries must be in before October 29th on the fat stock.
