Philadelphia in the Winter of 1777-1778.

Located in what is considered the richest agricultural belt in the country, Philadelphia offers to feed visitors to the Sesquicentennial Exposition next summer with choicest victuals. Its reputation as a farming center dates back to Revolutionary War days. In fact, the fertility of the surrounding country had much to do with the decision of the British to occupy the city during the winter of 1777-78. If it had not been for the strategy of Washington, the British troops would have feasted royally during the period.

When it was learned that Sir William Howe, commander of the British forces, was marching on the city, nervous suspense gripped the inhabitants. They hoarded their money, buried their silver and secreted as much imperishable food as their cellars would hold.

The suspense ended one day in September, 1777, when a squadron of dragoons galloped down one of the main streets. These were followed by columns of grenadiers, brilliant in their red coats and red caps fronted with silver shields. Behind the grenadiers came the hated Hessians, barbaric looking in their fierce mustaches towering brass headgear.

As soon as they were within the city the British commandeered all foodstuffs, and prepared to establish a line of supply reaching out into the fertile fields of the surrounding country. The idea was good, but Washington would not have it that way.

A month passed and he swept down upon the main British encampment at Germantown, a short distance north of the city. In the battle that followed, his forces were defeated by superior British numbers, but it taught the occupants that they could not venture far out without danger. Later Washington went into his winter camp at Valley Forge, only 20 miles from the city, and the British found themselves in a state of virtual siege.

An extract from a letter written by a British officer at the time gives an idea of the wisdom of Washington's action.

"Bread is nine shillings per pound," the officer wrote, "and bread costs six shillings a quarter loaf."

This will be the most widely scattered showing of Holsteins ever seen at the Pacific International, all of the Rocky Mountain states will be represented, probably some of the British Columbia people and on top of that famous herds from Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa will be in evidence. For the first time the Billwhack herd of Santa Paula, California, owned by Mr. Reubel, under the management of W. J. Snodgrass, will be seen in the North. They have been shown very successfully all over the South and just recently came from the Utah state fair. The celebrated Pabst herd of Milwaukee will come out on the special train, leaving right after the National Dairy show, October 20th. Margrove & Arnold of Iowa, who have been showing all over the Eastern circuit very successfully, will also be on this train. A group of cattle from the Wisconsin Breeders' Association, probably one from the Minnesota Association, will also come along, so that the old timers here on the coast, people like Carnation, Tom Owens, Fred Beale, Durbin, Ivers, Hollywood and men of that type will have their work cut out for them.

The city kid was roaming about in the country when he came upon a dozen or so empty condensed milk cans. Greatly excited, he yelled to his companions: "Hey, fellers, come here quick. I've found a cow's nest."

NEW LAW KILLS NOTED HOLIDAYS IN ALL OREGON.

Columbus Day and Lincoln Day No Longer Are Recognized SCHOOL CHANGE ALSO.

New Law Seems to Make It Necessary to Have School Holiday on General Election Day.

Apparently neither October 21 or February 11 are longer legal holidays in Oregon, and also apparently every general election is made a legal holiday.

This came out of the fact that one office in the courthouse was closed today (Monday) and the others were open for business. There was such divergence of opinion that a search of the laws was made, and it was found that the 1925 legislature made a new law fixing legal holidays, omitting today and Lincoln's anniversary on February 12, and adding general election days.

The new law is so worded that there may be some doubt, as it repeals only Section 7985 of general laws, whereas Section 7986 applies to Columbus day and Section 1987 to Labor day, and is not mentioned in the new law. Labor day is again mentioned, but Columbus day is omitted, leaving the inference that it was the intention to repeal this section.

Likely no one would have noticed the matter or taken the trouble to look up the matter had not the office of the county recorder remained closed. Judge Campbell held court and tried a case. It was an action brought by the Oregon-Idaho Dairy Loan company against Robert F. Tubbs, seeking to foreclose a chattel mortgage on cattle. The judge decided in favor of the plaintiff. Sheriff Mass was asking all attorneys when they filed papers whether they would advise that service be made today. He declined himself to take the responsibility for such service.

If the law stands as passed by the legislature it also cuts out all provisions that schools hold sessions upon certain mornings of legal holidays, particularly the Washington anniversary, and in addition seems to make it necessary that schools be dismissed upon election days. Heretofore schools held regular sessions unless the school building was used for election purposes.

According to the most recent statute the only legal holidays in Oregon are January 1, February 22, May 30, July 4, first Monday in September, November 11 and December 25. This is believed to have been the intention of the legislature, and it is felt that the law will stand as written, despite its failure to repeal two sections applying to legal holidays.

Eggs Actly So.

Complaint is made in the daily press that the cooperative egg association has been so manipulating the egg market that the cold storage interest and speculators have been getting the short end of profits, both spring and fall. In the spring, the charges state the price of eggs is held up so high that the ice house men have to pay high prices for their storage stock and in October it is charged the price was held so low in Portland that there was little profit in bringing them out while the cooperative association was selling carloads in New York at a nice advance over the Portland prices.

Members of the egg association say they are not feeling keen sympathy for the plight of the cold storage interests. They frankly state their association is being operated for the interests of the egg producers, rather than the speculators, and they rejoice that they have become strong enough to be a factor in setting prices on their own products, rather than to have the storage interests and the market editor fix prices for them. The state egg association is one of the outstanding cooperative successes of Oregon.

Pretty much all the old time famous Shorthorn people are back to the Pacific International again this year and on top of that some of the well-known breeders from far scattered sections of the country. Pacific Cattle company, Hollister, California, formerly showed with us, and very successfully indeed. This year they are back after the absence of last year. They have been performing wonderfully well all over the circuit. The Black Hawk Ranch of Diablo, California, are sending their celebrated herd of Shorthorns; first time they have shown in the North, although they have been on the big circuit back East. This is probably one of the most celebrated bunch of Scotch cattle in the United States today as Easton & Ward spent a number of months in Scotland making their selection. Going to make a pretty competition when our old friends get together and besides this our old friend Hay Brown of the Hayland Shorthorn Ranch, Sharnsburg, Illinois, is going to represent the cornbelt states.
