Straws have a peculiar faculty showing which way the wind blows. The agent of the largest fan factory in Japan says that before prohibition in this country they sold millions of them to breweries which used them for advertising purposes and to furnish ladies to cool their fevered brows while guzzling beer in beer gardens. Now he says, the business has dropped to nothing.

Those statisticians who are so given to laying something end to end to show by comparison the quantity have never yet computed the size of the stream or ocean the moonshine consumed at present would make. This is one bet those who deal in agents have overlooked.

Say you saw it in the News.

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP OF A GREAT UTILITY

We dare say that the American Telephone and Telegraph Company is the finest example of public ownership of a great utility in the world today.

In the past two and one half years through efforts of employees, there have been added 133,000 names to the largest list of corporate stockholders in the world.

Subscriptions have taken nearly 1,000,000 shares, an average of seven shares each, and the average price paid has been about $125 each.

The total number of stockholders of American Telephone & Telegraph Company, exclusive of those holding associated company preferred and common stocks, and of employees' purchases not yet paid up, is 358,000. Of this number 60,000 are Bell system employees. About $65,000,000 in stocks of five associated operating companies have been sold on a similar basis. Grand total of telephone security holders is 650,000.—Almagordo, N. M., News.
