State Legion Convention To Be Held At Coos Bay

With all the attractions for the Pacific Coast beaches at their disposal, as well as the hospitality of the Coos Bay country for which that district is noted, delegates to the State Legion convention, August 5, 6, and 7, on Coos Bay have a busy program outlined for them, according to announcement of the convention commission received today.

This commission made up of representatives of North Bend and Marshfield Legion posts has raised a fund of $5000 for entertainment purposes and delegates and their families will be guests of the posts as far as entertainment is concerned.

Drum corps contests, bathing beauty contests, free sea-food dinner, trips to U. S. Navy destroyers in Coos Bay harbor, trips to the beaches and many other free attractions have been arranged by the commission.

It is expected that fully 2500 persons will be in attendance at this convention, which is unique for the reason that two cities have combined to entertain the American Legion, Legion Auxiliary and 40 & 8 of Oregon.

Special rates on railroad and bus lines are assured for the event and some Columbia river posts have discussed chartering a vessel to travel on and live on while in port. "Keeper of the Bees" Coming to Liberty Soon

"The Keeper of the Bees" will be shown at the Liberty Theater Monday and Tuesday, May 24 and 25. This is a picture from the last book of Gene Stratton Porter, known to readers of American fiction as the "bird woman," and possibly knows more about birds, moths and wild plant life than any other similar author in this country. She wrote books on that side of life that appeal to most of us, right living, right thinking and that sweet, pure child life as it leads to the making of good young men and women.

"The Keeper of the Bees," James McFarlane, an ex-soldier of the late war was pronounced by the army surgeons incurable of a wound that would not heal. The doctor wanted to send him to Arizona tubercular hospital, but he overheard this plan by accident, determined to work out his own destiny and ran away. On the road he met with many adventures. At last he met the keeper of the bees, who, when dying, left James the bees, and by his care of them and his out-door life regained his health. Every member of the Legion should see this film, and every child.

Editors Honor Bert Haney Record Wins High Praise

Pointing to nation-wide recognition of the ability of Bert E. Haney as a public official, and the general approval of his record as United States shipping board commissioner, Lotus L. Langley, campaign manager for Haney has compiled a few of many editorial commendations of Haney as supporting his contention that Haney—because of his public record and without regard to his other qualifications for office—should be nominated by the Democrats of Oregon for the United States senatorship.

"I believe," Langley says in his statement accompanying these quotations, "that the voters of Oregon will be interested to know the high regard in which Mr. Haney is held throughout the country because of his record made as a member of the shipping board. He not only made good there, but he rendered most valuable service to the shipping development of Portland in particular and of all independent ports in general. It is proper, then, to submit for public consideration, the following quotations gleaned at random from a great mass, as indicative of Haney's standing.

The Marine Journal, New York—Mr. Haney has come to be well regarded in Washington as a man of vigor and independence and a stout partisan of the interests of Oregon and the Pacific Coast.

New York Evening World.—Bert Haney is a man of good reputation and stands high in the esteem of people of all political faiths on the Pacific Coast. His particular grievance is that President Palmer of the Emergency fleet corporation is allowing the merchant marine to run down.

Houston Post—Now that he has finally resigned from the shipping board it is unfair to charge Mr. Haney with having played politics with his membership on the commission. He was standing for a principle. The people of the Northwest were already familiar with Haney's work for their ports and were friendly to him.

The Baltimore Sun—Mr. Haney has his own views of how our merchant marine should be handled and while they do not agree with Admiral Palmer's head of the emergency fleet corporation, he is exercising his right under the law in expressing them. He may even be cantankerous but he is giving an exhibit of independence and of having a mind of his own which is entitled to consideration.

Los Angeles Examiner—By constant hammering Haney forced the retirement of Admiral Leigh C. Palmer as head of the corporation.

Portland Telegram—Portland has had fine representation on the shipping board, Chamberlain, Teal, and Haney, all high grade men who stood head and shoulders above most of their colleagues. To but few men is given the opportunity to render such notable service to the commercial interests of their country as that which has marked the career of Bert Haney as shipping commissioner.

Portland Oregonian—In opposing Admiral Palmer's acts, Mr. Haney has stoutly maintained the position that this delegation of authority is contrary to law and in so doing has incidentally defended the interests of Portland, his home; but not only of this port, but of every other independent port that is struggling against the influence behind Palmer. All who know Mr. Haney know that he is incapable of acting contrary to any understanding he may have had prior to his reappointment, also that he would not knowingly enter into any such understanding as is alleged, since he would have been a sacrifice to his known conviction, often expressed and of the interests of the community in which he was born and has long lived as an honorable citizen.

The Congressional Record—Resolution adopted by the United States shipping board: Whereas, Honorable Bert E. Haney of Oregon, since July 1, 1923, a commissioner of the United States shipping board has severed his official relations with the board and whereas, by his legal ability, his unflinching industry and active participation in working upon the problems of this board and his aggressive championship of an adequate merchant marine under the American flag he has endeared himself to the members of this board with whom he has served.—Oregon Journal.
