SOME DELUSION ABOUT OUR WAR ENRICHMENT

The fact that the United States was not enriched by the war as is commonly supposed and that its percentage of increase of wealth did not keep pace with the pre-war rate or with that of some of the other warring nations is brought out in the current issue of the National Republic by the editor, Mr. George B. Leckwood, who further declares that America's growth in wealth is due to one thing and one thing only and that is more work, thought and enterprise applied to its natural resources under a sounder, more stable government. In touching on the increase of wealth the National Republic says:

"The delusion that the United States was enriched by the war is deeply rooted throughout the world. Despite the fact that official statistics explode it, this utterly unwarrantable theory, responsible for much of the hatred of America existing in Europe, not only has been free from attack by responsible American statesmen, but has been approved by them in thousands of public utterances. This strange policy has worked immeasurable harm not only to the United States but to Europe since the only hope of European recovery is through adoption of the means which are actually responsible for the great growth of American wealth.

"It has been repeatedly pointed out in these columns that the growth of our national wealth during the eight year period 1904-1912 was over seventy percent in dollars of practically equal value, that during the succeeding longer period 1912-1922 the increase was about twenty per cent, but a report of the Federal Trade Commission shows that the actual increase during the ten-year period including the war was sixteen per cent in dollars of equivalent value, so that our pre-war growth in wealth was slowed down more than three-fourths during the war period. Since 1922 the growth in our national wealth has been resumed at about the pre-war rate. In the face of these indisputable facts, one wonders at the effrontery or ignorance which attributes America's growth in wealth to the world war, especially when we are told that it has been at the expense of "impoverished Europe."

The national wealth of France increased more than twice as rapidly, depreciation of the dollar taken into account, from 1912 to 1922 than it did from 1904 to 1912. Of all the sophistry dealt out to the American people by statesmen and near statesmen during and since the war this theory of American enrichment by the war is the filiiest."

Crop Bound

The disorder of fowls known as "crop bound" or impacted crop is and overdistended and paralyzed condition of the crop, generally caused by over eating or by swallowing coarse and indigestible substances, such as feathers or tough vegetation. The first symptom is a loss of appetite or an effort of the bird to swallow without being able to do so. If permitted to continue, the condition becomes aggravated, the breathing difficult and death may result.

The contents of the crop which are more or less firmly packed may sometimes be removed by forcing the bird to swallow a teaspoon of sweet oil then massaging the lower part of the gullet if it contains food or if not, the part of the crop nearest to the gullet, until a part of the contents is softened and may be pressed toward the head. This is made easier by holding the bird head downward. By continued manipulation the greater part of the material may be removed. The bird should not be permitted to eat for several hours after it is relieved.

If this treatment fails, with a sharp knife, make an opening in the crop not more than one inch in length. Through this opening remove the contents, using for this purpose a coffee spoon, a button hook, small forceps, a bent wire, or other suitable instrument. Then wash out the crop with clean, warm water. Close the opening with 3 or 4 stitches in the wall of the crop and an equal number in the skin. Tie each stitch separately. Coarse white silk thread is best for the purpose. If this is not at hand, ordinary white cotton thread may be used. For a day or two feed on milk and raw egg beaten together and gradually change to soft mash.

Have liver frequently—any kind is good, and adds to the days supply of minerals and vitamins.

Feed for Dry Cows

Dry cows will consume almost as much roughage as those in milk. Silage may well form the principal ingredient of the ration. If given 25 to 40 pounds of silage and about 5 to 6 pounds of clover, cowpea or alfalfa hay a day, the cows will keep in good flesh and even make some gain. Those in thin flesh should receive in addition a small amount of grain. Some grain during the dry period is often advisable.

Hay for Poor Lands

Where it is necessary to raise hay on poor clay lands, orchard grass, tall oat grass and some alike mixture probably give the best results. In some places in the middle west sweet clover does well under unpromising soil conditions. There are no perennial hay plants that will produce well on sandy soils. No one should make a practice of growing hay for market on poor soil.

States with Big Auto Increase

States showing the greatest increase in automobile registration the first half of 1926 are Florida 76.2 per cent, Michigan 24.3 per cent, Mississippi 21.0 per cent, Arkansas 19.0 per cent and Oklahoma 16.7 per cent. Increases between 14 and 16 percent are reported by Georgia, Idaho, Nevada and North Dakota.

WILL WEAR UNTIL THE META BASE SHOWS

The life of Duco finish on a Chevrolet automobile is indefinite in that it will eventually wear through to the metal with constant rubbing and polishing. A conservative estimate however, would place the life of Duco finish at several years.

A paper dress form can be used for fitting garments under construction, or altering ready-made ones; for adapting commercial patterns, adjusting straps on petticoats and brassieres, tacking wash collars in place and designing new dresses. Those who go away from home should leave their forms behind to facilitate sewing for them.
