The Most Beautiful Chevrolet in Chevrolet History

In addition to masterly new bodies by Fisher—in addition to a host of mechanical improvements typified by AC oil filter and AC air cleaner—the Most Beautiful Chevrolet offers certain features heretofore regarded as marks of distinction on the costliest cars. These are made possible at Chevrolet's amazingly reduced prices only because volume production results in definite economies and because Chevrolet now, as always, passes these savings on to the buyer in the form of added value.

No other car, as low in price, offers such features as fish-tail modeling, full-crown one-piece fenders, bullet-type lamps and the like. Come in—and see for yourself!

FISH-TAIL MODELING—adds a distinguished sweep to the rear of the Roadster, Coupe and Sport Cabriolet.

FULL-CROWN FENDERS—(one-piece) which lend substantial grace to the sweeping body lines.

BULLET-TYPE HEAD LAMPS—and cow lamp. Up-to-the-minute in style.

TIRE CARRIER—mounted free from the body, rigidly supported by steel brackets.

John Tromble, president of the Kansas State Farmers Union, in a recent speech at Hutchinson, says that big business has under way the organization and control of agriculture under one head, controlled by big industries, with experts supervising farming and farmers working under orders. Tromble said under this plan of scientific farming farmers would be little less than peasants.

Purchasing of merchandise upon terms of installment payments is now recognized as good business, says E. R. White, manager of the Oregon City branch of the Eastern Outfitting company.

Mr. White has had a long experience with this system of merchandising and says that the losses from failure to pay for goods purchased are becoming almost negligible. The terms of payment are adjusted by him to suit his customer and he says that the first sale is only an introduction to steady business with his customers. He believes strongly in advertising and is out for business in this end of the county.

You save an average of about $15 on each hog you slaughter for your own use. Of course this saving doesn't take into consideration the cost of your labor, curing materials and such things.

A scientist at Philadelphia traces man back to a primitive fish. And sometimes we think that most of us haven't got far away from the home plate even yet.

BACK TO THE SOIL

Where manure is used as fertilizer, cows on home-grown feeds, under proper management, will return to the soil about 80 per cent of the fertility taken from the land in growing their feed.

BETTER RANGE PASTURE

Grazing the herbage of bunch grasses on cattle and sheep ranges of the West when its average height is four inches or less not only fails to satisfy the hunger of the animals but also stunts the vegetation, say grazing experts of the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture. Furthermore the shortage of forage of good food value and the high succulence and comparatively low nutritive value of young herbage sometimes causes serious livestock losses early in the spring. Bunch grasses, as a general rule should be about six inches in height before grazing begins, and the earlier-maturing plants should have flower stalks showing.

Grazing closely twice or even three times in a season, provided the first grazing is late enough and the intervals are sufficient for the vegetation to recover fully from each cropping, ordinarily does not seriously affect the yield and vigor of the plant cover.

Maintenance and improvement of native pasture lands, the forage on which is composed largely of bunch grasses, is dependent upon the periodical production of a fertile seed crop. To insure seed production of the more palatable forage plants requires prevention of too early grazing, avoidance of overgrazing, and effective control and distribution of stock.

THE OUTLOOK FOR 1927

The O. A. C. Extension Service says that while there has not been much liquidation of farm mortgages in Oregon, farmers have been generally catching up on current indebtedness during the past two years. The report says tree fruit growers have not fared as well as other commodity producers, owing to low prices and troubles resulting from the use of spray. Of general business conditions the service says the situation continues without developments in either way and that there is nothing in sight that suggests sudden changes.

draw considerable blood and their bites irritate the hens so they often lose flesh and even stop laying. The best thing to do is to spray the chicken house with one of the wood preservatives, such as carbolineum, or with crude petroleum or creosote oil. You'll need from 3 to 5 gallons of the spray for a house which holds 200 hens. Spray it with a good force pump. Drive the liquid into the cracks in the wood.
