Early Montmartre
 Montmartre, the hill of Paris, derives its name perhaps from the Latin, mons martis, but probably from the fact that back in the Roman days a temple of Mars was located on the summit, says the Independent.
 For many years it remained a little village famous for its windmills and gypsum quarries, then a convent for Benedictine nuns was erected where the temple once stood. In 1800 the wall separating Montmartre from Paris was destroyed and little by little artists began to congregate there because living was comparatively cheap.

 Montmartre awoke to a new life. It became the cradle of the nation's art. It was frequented by such men as Dumas, Daudet and Verlain. Beranger dodged desperately about its streets. It saw Gautier in scarlet trousers and Baudelaire, reeking in filth, pouring forth his beautiful verse. Cafes were the main source of its inspiration.

UPPER GARFIELD

The Ship-a-Week club met at the school on Wednesday as guests of Mr. Beck and the children. A talk was given by Miss Springer, the county nurse, which was enjoyed by all.
 Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Weatherly and Mrs. J. B. Robertson of Garfield Grange attended the Pomona Grange at Tualatin last Wednesday.
 Roy Beck has been hired as the Garfield teacher for next year.
 Mrs. J. F. Reeher is visiting her daughter, Mrs. C. C. Colt, in Vancouver, Washington.
 A. C. Van Houten and J. F. Reeher were in Oregon City on business last Saturday.
 Mrs. R. E. Davis, Glenn, and Loray were out to the ranch several days last week.
 The Easter service at the Nora Memorial church was much enjoyed.
 Mrs. W. G. Weatherby was in Oregon City and Parkplace on Wednesday.

"Wires" Sent by Pigeons

Before the invention of the electric telegraph, carrier pigeons provided the fastest known means of transmitting messages, and were even used by English stockbrokers to get early reports on the market.
 The carrier pigeon is useful because of his accuracy in returning to his home, and the speed of his flight. He must be carefully trained over a long period. Pigeons have been known to carry a message as far as 500 miles in one day. During the Franco-Prussian war they were used by both armies to carry messages, but the invention of telegraph and wireless soon led to their abandonment.
