Estacada Boy Wins Honors at Corvallis

A native son of Estacada carried off the highest honors at the recent graduation exercises at Corvallis high school, according to a dispatch.

Both "Scholastic Honors," and "Special Honors" are extra commendations which appear on the diploma of Fred Saling, formerly a resident of this city and a student of the local school.

The "scholastic honor" is awarded pupils who have maintained an average of "B" or better throughout their entire high school course, while the "special honor" is received by only eleven students, being based upon scholastic excellence, activities, leadership, and loyalty to the school.

Young Saling tied with another boy for the highest scholastic honors in the class. This is unusual, the award usually being won by a girl.
