Victor H. Dunton Speaks For Himself

Candidate for the nomination as sheriff of Clackamas county of the democratic party.

If elected sheriff I will give a clean business like administration economically consistent with efficiency and by devoting myself energetically to the duties of my office I will devise ways of avoiding duplication of detail work and thereby be able to operate with only the necessary amount of help by subordinates. As sheriff I will surround myself with the best available and most competent deputies in each community, regarding character and ability as the first requisite.

In regard to the management of my office, service and courtesy will be the keynotes and by close co-operation with the authorities of municipalities in the county, I will avoid misunderstandings and duplication of field work.

By calling on the state and federal departments when necessary I will have help in the apprehension of criminals and it is my belief that when an understanding is fully established as to my policy in dealing with law violators, there will be little need for more commodious quarters in the county jail and those of confirmed criminal inclinations will seek more agreeable surroundings for plying their nefarious trades.

I will pay special attention to curbing the vice ring that has stuck its fangs into Clackamas county.

I will give a strict account of all moneys handled by me as tax collector, and receive of auto license fees and will co-operate with other county officials in keeping record information in the best possible shape.

I will conduct all branches of my office as prescribed by law.

I will let my deeds rather than my picture speak for my work.—Adv.

MARIE PREVOST IN NEW COMEDY HIT

Appearing in one of the most amusing feature comedies of the season, Marie Prevost achieves artistic and personal triumph in her latest Metropolitan picture, "The Night Bride," which will be presented at the Liberty Theatre here Wednesday and Thursday of next week. Harrison Ford, Robert Edeson and Franklin Pangborn appear in featured roles and share stellar honors with the star and do much to make the comedy an unusual hit.

Miss Prevost displays her powers as comedienne in the role of a self-willed girl whose refusal to marry her fiance when she sees him kiss her sister just before the nuptials are to be celebrated, brings about many amusing complications which, of course, are happily adjusted before the final fadeout.

She quits her home and finds a refuge in the home of Stanley Warrington, an author and violent woman hater. Her father follows her and to avoid scandal, she tells him that she is the writer's wife. How to live up to the fix, taxes the resources of both Cynthia and Warrington, but it is finally accomplished to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Miss Prevost is delightful as the girl and Mr. Ford as the author and Mr. Pangborn as his servant, aided materially in providing humor with which the production is packed. The work of the supporting players notably that of Robert Edeson as the father, Constance Howard and Geo. Kuwa, is all that the most exacting taste could demand.
