

Mountains as Protection

The weather bureau says a town surrounded by nearby mountains is not so likely to be injured by winds as it would be if these mountains did not exist. Winds often are very strong in mountain-passes or gaps, but severe storms do not particularly favor valleys, except where the valleys lie in the general direction the storm would take if there were no hills or valleys there.

Traveling Book

Few traveling-books are better than a good anthology of poetry in which every page contains something complete and perfect in itself. The brief respite from labor which the self-immolated tourist allows himself cannot be more delightfully filled than with the reading of poetry, which may even be got by heart.—Aldous Huxley, in "Along the Road."

Man's Proper Outlook

There is no true and constant gentleness without humility; while we are so fond of ourselves, we are easily offended with others. Let us be persuaded that nothing is due to us, and then nothing will disturb us. Let us often think of our own infirmities, and we shall become indulgent toward those of others.—Francis De La Mothe Fenelon.

Affection

It was an ancient king who exclaimed he had no stronger garrison than the affections of his people. So with all men in positions of leadership. They cannot command real loyalty through fear. They cannot command respect by force. The only loyalty that has value is the loyalty inspired by affection.—Exchange.

She Knew It

A little miss of four years was sitting on her aunt's lap, when suddenly the aunt leaned down and gave her a big hug, saying: "My, but you're sweet!" The little miss complacently raised her big blue eyes to her aunt's face and replied: "That's what they all think."

A New World!

"When I walk out of my house into my garden," wrote Alexander Smith, "I walk out of my habitual self, my every-day thoughts. . . Its gate gives entrance to another kingdom, with its own interests and annals and incidents. It is a place of escape and peace."

In a Quandary

Absent-Minded Naturalist—Now, let me think—have I been so foolish as to bring these clubs instead of my collecting equipment, or have I been idiotic enough to come here instead of going to the golf links?

Wrong Idea of Sin

Mora should be written about the pleasures of virtue. The old theology gave the impression that sin is delightful and that those who forego it give up what is most thrilling in life.—American Magazine.

The Moon Debunked

As good proof as any that the moon is not made of green cheese is offered by a little McPherson girl. She says it cannot be true because God made the moon two days before he made cows.—Capper's Weekly.

Publicity Can Do a Lot

After all publicity without something back of it never accomplished a great deal in this world. At the same time it can do a lot for a worthwhile proposition.—Aitchison Globe.

Up to Dad

Another advantage to having father play with the children is that it becomes father's duty to explain why the new skillet was being used as home plate in the baseball game.

Vegetably Speaking

"Life's a game of shell'n' peas," says Bill Benz, the neighborhood philosopher, "and the good sports are willin' to take podluck."—Farm and Fireside.

Nope

The weather makes us tired and disgusted at times. But would it be any better if men instead of the Lord controlled it?—Aitchison Globe.

Doesn't Look Its Age

Scientists at the University of California, after a geologic survey of Colorado, Utah and Arizona, claim the world is 75,000,000 years old.

Inexperience

One of the first signs of inexperience is thinking a thing's unusual because it never happened to you before.—Farm and Fireside.

Where's the Humor?

Probably the world's greatest humorist was the man who named them "easy payments."—Louisville Times.

Recipe of Success

The man who does a little more than his share each day will eventually succeed.—Aitchison Globe.

No Shackles, Please

The most important thing is not to keep love, but to have it.—Woman's Home Companion.

Minerals in Celery

Iron, potassium, magnesium, calcium and phosphorus are found in celery.

Testing Block Tin

It would be necessary to have a chemical analysis made to tell whether block tin is pure. A block-tin pipe will have the characteristic white color of tin on a filed surface, it will be soft and easily bent, and it will "crackle" on rapid bending. This "tin cry" is due to the motion of the large tin crystals. The melting point of pure tin is about 232 degrees centigrade, and this gives another method of checking the purity.

Use of Medicines

It is instinct for human beings to take medicine when they are not feeling well, but the indiscriminate use of medicines does more harm than good. The home medicine chest, which is usually located in the bathroom, should be planned with care, and it should be located high enough so that small children cannot reach it.

Looking Forward

The modern man no longer preserves the memories of his great-grandfather, but he is engaged in writing a detailed and authoritative biography of his great-grandson. Instead of trembling before the specters of the dead we shudder at the shadow of the babe unborn.—Gilbert K. Chesterton.

Wonders Grown Stale

If we could have looked out from some Egyptian point of vantage and seen the pyramids rising before our eyes how privileged we would have felt. So should we feel in seeing man wielding the materials of the earth to his advantage in modern skyscrapers.—Woman's Home Companion.

Fish Stories

It is reported from America that a man drowning in the sea was pushed ashore by a shoal of friendly porpoises. We understand that a meeting of prominent British fishermen has been hastily summoned to think of a better one.—London Humorist.

That Tricky Budget

Annual occurrence: After the family budget was all straightened away the other night so that income just balanced expenses in the family's next fiscal year, it was discovered no provision had been made for groceries.—Terre Haute Tribune.

Most Delicate Dog

Ordinarily the Russian wolf-hound is considered a beast of the cold northern wastes, hardly beyond man's endurance. However, it is one of the most delicate of the dogs, slight changes in temperature being fatal to it.

Kennel Advertisement

A kiss will last but a day, ten pounds of candy she will eat and forget; the roses you send will fade with the dawn, but a Persian kitten or a nice puppy is an hourly reminder of you.—Exchange.

Highways Built to Last

The Roman highways have endured to the present time because their foundations were four and five feet deep and made of various types of stone suited to the locality, principally limestone and lava.

London's Peace Guardians

The city of London has one policeman to each acre and to every 12 of the population. This latter figure, however, is based on the night population as the city area has few residents.

Gospels in Agreement

The synoptic gospels are those which have the same point of view—that is, they show agreements in their subject, order, language, etc. They are Matthew, Mark and Luke.

It's Nice to Have It

Culture and education and wealth do not create happiness, but a few poor people would risk contentment for a few more shekels.—American Magazine.

Short Lived Dollars

A paper dollar lasts about seven months in circulation, and all of ours require about seven seconds to get into circulation.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Found

The long-lost art of conversation has been found; it is possessed by certain people who try to play bridge.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Title of High Honor

Mahatma in Hindu means great-souled one. It is also the name of the high priest or wise leader of the theosophists.

Ant Eggs Human Food

Ant eggs are known as ant rice in some parts of Africa, and constitute one of the principal foods of the natives.

Highly Popular Fruit

Strawberries are grown for home use in every state in the Union, and commercially in at least half of them.

The Pastor Says:

A good woman as truly gives life to her husband as to her children.—John Andrew Holmes.

Chinese Like Shark Fins

Shark fins are a favorite food with the Chinese, who will pay $1 apiece for them.
