AT THE LIBERTY THEATRE

"Streets of Shanghai" a story which dramatically portrays an exciting incident in the mysterious city of Shanghai involving a pretty American girl and a marine is the feature at the Liberty theatre, Estacada, on Thursday and Friday. The story runs in an unbroken continuity and sustains the interest throughout.

The story tells of the meeting of an American Mission teacher with the handsome marine who is stationed at the United States consulate in the Chinese city. Frantic at the thought that one of her pupils has been kidnapped by a nefarious band she traces the girl to a room in a certain quarter of the city, and there she is aided by several marines who learn her story and aid her in rescue.

ing her charge. The handsome young marine is immediately smitten by the charms of the little lady, and the next few weeks sees him paying her ardent court. But in the work of rescue the school teacher has aroused the enmity of a powerful Chinese mandarin whose son is also in love with the mission teacher. He has his henchmen surround the mission to kill the white girl, but the timely arrival of a force of marines saves the lives of the defenders and cements more strongly the bonds of the couple.

Pauline Starke plays the featured role in the production and she is ably assisted by Kenneth Harlan, Margaret Livingston, Eddie Gribbon, Joseph Robards, Mathilde Comont, Sojin and Anna May Wong. The story is by John Francis Natteford, and directed by Louis J. Gasnier.

It would do any of us good if he should take himself by the arm, walk himself to a quiet place, and force himself to face thoroughly and without evasion the question, "What am I really after? What is my chief aim in life? What is it for which I am really living? We are so busy doing things that often we do not stop to ask "why?" What is the end of it all? Our fathers were wise men, and they showed their wisdom by putting first in their catechism, "What is man's end?" This is the first question for everyone. The answer is, "To glorify God, and enjoy Him forever." That is a high aim in life. What I am here for? What is my chief end? What mark am I trying to hit?

Your attention is directed to the following discussion of scripture themes for next Sunday morning at 11 a. m., "The God of Hope," and at 7:30 p. m., "Promising Without Doing." ROD LA ROCQUE HAS FINE PICTURE IN "HOLD 'EM YALE"

The football team of the Estacada high school is presenting a show at the Liberty Theatre next Wednesday, and have selected the famous Rod La Rocque's "Hold 'Em Yale," for this occasion. Picture fans who were thrilled by La Rocque's football playing as an Indian in "Braveheart" and as an Englishman seeking thrills in battles with Grecian bandits, will be more than delighted with his impersonation of a young Argentine athlete and football player in "Hold 'Em Yale," a deMille studio production for Pathe.

The story, based on Owen Davis' famous stage success, "At Yale," deals with the son of a wealthy planter in Argentine who foils a trio of bandits and later meets the daughter of a Yale professor travelling in Argentine. He decides to go to Yale and an interesting love romance results, in the course of which he wins distinction as a college athlete. The action is said to be swift-moving and highly dramatic, the whole relieved by delightful comedy.
