Tires for the new Ford are specially made to give long wear

WHEN the new Ford was designed, it was immediately apparent that a new tire would have to be made to match the car's performance. It was distinctly a new problem, for here was a car with quicker acceleration, greater speed and more braking efficiency than any car of similar size or weight.

So that every Ford owner might be assured of maximum tire mileage at the lowest cost, the Ford Motor Company devoted many months to research and experiment in conjunction with the leading tire manufacturers.

As a result, certain definite specifications were developed for tires for the new Ford. These specify cords of certain strength and texture, a large volume of tread and side-wall rubber, sturdy non-skid design, and reinforced plies for protection against bruise breaks—all the strong features of construction formerly considered for only the largest tires.

Great care also was taken to secure the best riding qualities in connection with the transverse springs and the Houdaille shock absorbers.

Though the Ford tires are designated as 30 x 4.50, they have the resiliency and air space of much larger tires because of the drop center rim of the steel-spoke wheels.

For best results, the tires on the new Ford should be kept inflated to an air pressure of 35 pounds and checked regularly to insure this pressure all the time. This is important. Low inflation breaks down the side-walls of a tire. By causing overheating, it also destroys the rubber that acts as an insulation, with consequent separation of the cord.

At the end of each 5000 miles, when you have the front wheels packed with grease, it is a good plan to have the wheel alignment checked. This will prevent premature wear.

When punctures come, as they will with any tire, you will find the Ford dealer particularly well-equipped to make repairs quickly and at small cost. See him, too, for replacements. Then you will be sure of getting tires built specially for the Ford car according to definite Ford specifications.

OREGON MINERAL OUTPUT VALUED AT $7,000,000

Oregon's annual mineral production, consisting chiefly of stone, sand and gravel, cement, clay products and metals, amounts to about $7,000,000, says Dr. J. H. Hance, dean of the Oregon State school of mines.

The gold output from the placer mines is of special importance now. It is reported that some of the more recent underground explorations are opening up promising copper and gold ore reserves in the Grants Pass district. High freight into this region is one of the factors which handicap the development of the mining industry there.

A railroad between Grants Pass and Crescent City, with some harbor improvements at the latter place, is contemplated. Deposits of no practical value at present, might be operated then with a margin of profit.

REFORESTATION LAW LIKED

The new law passed at the recent legislature providing for classification of reforestation land and its assessment at but 5 cents an acre while new trees are growing on it, is the most important piece of reforestation legislation enacted in any state, says George W. Peavy, dean of the forestry school at Oregon State College. This law provides for the collection of a yield tax of 12½ per cent when the timber is cut, while reducing taxes to a minimum on logged off land so as to encourage reforestation.

DAIRYMEN READY FOR MEET

Plans are practically completed for the big state-wide dairy conference at Corvallis March 21 and 22, when dairymen from every county in the state will meet with representatives of every division of the industry to map out plans for steady and orderly development of Oregon into a greater dairy state. Committees appointed in advance have been busy gathering new information, especially as regards marketing possibilities, and will have it ready for presentation at the conference.

J. W. Turton, of Niles, Mich., has driven the three Ford automobiles he has owned a distance equal to nine times around the world, has never been out of oil, gas or water and has never had an accident. He purchased his first Ford, a touring car, in 1915, drove it 103,200 miles and then sold it for $125 cash.
