NEW TED WELLS FILM COMING TO THE LIBERTY

Presenting the ever-popular Ted Wells in a role that calls for some of the most difficult trick riding ever performed on the screen, "Born to the Saddle," a Universal Western feature, is on at the Liberty Theatre, Estacada, for tonight and tomorrow night (Friday and Saturday).

Wells, who is considered the best thrill rider in pictures, plays a Chicago millionaire, who spends his vacation on a mountain ranch, living the life of a cowboy. Becoming involved with a wealthy man and his daughter, who experience a series of hair-raising adventures with a band of outlaws determined to kidnap the father, Wells is precipitated into one dangerous and thrilling situation after another.

"Born to the Saddle" was directed by Joseph Levigard from the original story by Bruce Mitchell and George Plympton. A picture replete with thrills, it is certain to keep its audience tense with excitement throughout the entire showing.

Duane Thompson, a beautiful and talented young actress who has been seen in a number of Wells pictures, has the featured lead in "Born to the Saddle." Miss Thompson, a former dancer, is said to give one of the best performances of her career in this picture. Included in the cast are Leo White, Merrill McCormick, Nelson McDowell and Byron Douglas. The picture was made under the personal supervision of William Lord Wright.

BREAK INTO PICTURES COMES OF BROKEN LEG

Richard Arlen is the only actor in Hollywood who broke into the movies with a broken leg.

The young Paramount leading man, now playing the most important series of roles of his screen career, was carried into the studio to which he has been under contract for three years, on a stretcher.

Unable to get even extra work, he had taken a job delivering film on a motorcycle. Just outside the Paramount studio he had an accident, resulting in a broken leg.

It was while in the hospital that he met the people who later gave him work as an extra.

Arlen scored heavily in Clara Bow's "Ladies of the Mob," and in the epic of hoboemia, "Beggars of Life." His most recent screen role is that of the young playwright in "Manhattan Cocktail," the story of life behind the scenes on Broadway, which the Liberty Theatre, Estacada, will show on Sunday and Monday.
