We hope the county court will take note of the ruin of those nice plywood signs on our public roads that indicate where curves and cross roads are. They are very essential for the direction of visiting tourists over our scenic highways. Shall we not erect permanent signs and keep them freshly painted so they can be seen on even the dark and stormy nights.

The cherries disappointed us this year. No fruit on account of untimely rains on the blossoms. First time in all the years we have lived up here in the hills.

LITTLE GREEN TENTS

The following poem by Walt Mason while referring to the boys of '62 is equally applicable to the boys of '98 and the boys of '17. Believing the readers of the News will appreciate its sentiment it is being reprinted this week when our thots are directed to Memorial day.

The little green tents where the soldiers sleep,
And the sunbeams play and the women weep,
Are covered with flowers today.
And between the tents walk the weary few
Who were young and stalwart in sixty-two,
When they went to the war away.
The little green tents are built of sod
And they are not long and they are not broad,
But they have lots of room.
And the sod is part of the land they saved,
When the flag of the enemy darkly waved,
The symbol of dole and gloom.
The little green tent is a thing divine
The little green tent is a country's shrine,
Where the patriots kneel and pray.
And the brave men left, so old, so few,
Were young and stalwart in sixty-two
When they went to the wars away.
Walt Mason.

A lone man clings to rocky crag of the High Sierras, his chance for life as perilous as his grip. He's cornered, but he isn't beaten. Because you see, this isn't what he was born for. He should have had a fireside on a friendly farm, the warm arms of a loving woman. Instead his strange destiny, his fateful story are carved forever on the peaks of "High Sierra." See Humphrey Bogart and Ida Lupino in this stirring drama at the Esta theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, June 1, 2 and 3.—Adv.

Deserted Fawns
At this time of the year when does are dropping their fawns the state game commission officials and state police are flooded with inquiries concerning deserted fawns.
If you are tramping thru the deer country and run into a fawn seemingly deserted, don't molest it, because in all probability the mother is out foraging for food and will be back in due time to give maternal attention to the young one.
The best rule, say game officials, is to just keep hands off the fawns and let the mother handle the situation.
