A STRIKE OF THE PEOPLE

If we want strikes in defense industries to stop its up to the people in this town to help stop them.

It may seem to many of us that there isn't much we can do about it, that it's the problem of the federal government in Washington. But we mustn't forget that everyone of us is a part of that government and what we say, if we say it loud enough is what really makes action.

Every report we get from Washington stresses the fact that our senators and representatives are more interested in our opinions than they ever were before.

If you want a law banning strikes tell your congressman about it. If you think we should try to settle strikes without a new law tell your congressman that. But whatever you think, don't leave him guessing about it, make sure there is no doubt in his mind just what you want.

It's within your power, right here in the town to do a lot toward settling this situation which is slowing up defense.

Some of us blame the unions and others blame the employer for strikes but all of agree that whoever is to blame strikes must not go on.

And the way to bring them to an abrupt end is by a nation-wide counter strike of the American people, a "strike" in which we stage a mass picketing demonstration in every congressman's office in the form of letters, letters in which we demand an immediate settlement of all strikes.

Promising Crops Seen by Visitors on Station Tour. Grass that stays green the year around under western Oregon conditions and new clovers that increase the growth of the grass and add to the food value of pasture were viewed by hundreds of farmers at the annual central experiment station field days the last week of May.

While most of the crops viewed were of particular interest west of the Cascades some of the new introductions as well as older crops still growing on the station are of use in other parts of the state. Two crops emphasized most are not particularly new. In fact both have been grown on the station for many years and both are now being used fairly widely. These were tall fescue among the grasses and subterranean clover among the legumes.

The tall fescue is rapidly becoming one of the leading pasture crops for the hill lands or other unirrigated portions of western Oregon where it will supply feed as long as eleven months out of the year. Oscar Loe, one of the growers who was with the Marion delegation on the tour of the station stated that he has had tall fescue on his place for nine years and there hasn't been a month in all that time that it hasn't been green.

Various strains of subterranean clover were shown and forage men in charge of the tour said that each year indicates wider use for this peculiar annual legume which acts like a perennial by reseeding itself even under pasture conditions.

Experimental plots to show the comparative value of raising grass seed in rows or in solid plantings are too new to be conclusive but those in charge said it has already been demonstrated that for tall fescue and English ryegrass solid plantings are best which with Reed canary grass the row plantings produce most seed.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

One of the great and as yet unanswered questions of military science is this: "Which is the more vital weapon, air power or sea power?" Ten or fifteen years ago an Italian strategist developed the theory that the bombing airplane had made all other weapons of war almost obsolete, etc. that the nation with overwhelming strength in the skies could force any enemy to capitulate in a matter of weeks. That theory which was far more or less accepted by the Germans has proven wrong. Britain has been given incredible punishment by the Luftwaffe without perceptible break in the people's morale and with relatively little effect on British industrial production.

Another school which had many followers in England and in this country held that the airplane highly developed as it might be (would be nothing more than an auxiliary weapon that battle fleets and land armies would still be the determining factor. And that theory has also proven a mistaken one. Germany's air power was her prime weapon in effecting her successes in Poland, the Low Countries and elsewhere. To a very great extent the Reich land troops simply mopped up after the air divisions had terrorized populations, confounding opposing armies and make resistance impossible.

Destruction of the battle cruiser Hood by the new German battleship Bismarck must be described as a disaster. The Hood, despite her years was the fastest and most powerful ship-of-the-line in the world and was one of the very few ships which could meet the new German super men-of-war on even terms in both speed and fire power. She was considered virtually unsinkable by some experts, and she was depended upon as a dominant factor in keeping Britain's sea lanes open. The psychological effect of her loss in an engagement in which the German fleet was given little punishment will be very bad.

However even without the Hood the British have 15 battleships to Hitler's three and should be no danger of the Germans seriously challenging British sea supremacy, unless Hitler's captains can perform many more miracles comparable to the blowing up of the Hood. Best chance Hitler has of materially strengthening his sea arm is acquisition of the French fleet. Only the incurably optimistic now believe that the pro-Axis government would do much to prevent this. Admiral Darlan, second in command to the ancient and ailing Marshall Pétain is violently anti-English.

Grass Controls Fern Growth

Chewings fescue and highland bent grass plus Indino clover seeded in the spring on burned over fern land may be a solution to the fern problem according to recent trials in Linn county reported by county agent F. C. Mullen. Pastures grazed heavily by sheep have made good growth and practically no fern is showing up because the sheep keep the young fern shoots broken off. Another year of pasturing will indicate definitely the feasibility of spring seeding of grasses on burned over fern land in this region says Mullen.

There is some criticism in high quarters of our present army program. The critics argue that too many of our ranking officers are still thinking in terms of the last war and have been incredibly blind to the lessons of this war.

Vegetable Seed Grown in K. F.

Paprika is one of the most recent crops being tried out for seed production at Klamath Falls. Vegetable seed crops of which there is a considerable acreage in the county this year are spinach 50 acres; radishes 50 acres; and an estimated 200 acres each of peas, and horsebeans reports county agent C. A. Henderson.

The army's program calls for comparatively few mechanized divisions. Backbone is still the traditional infantry. While there will be more specialization than in the past the emphasis will remain on tremendous masses of men with only basic training.
