Bottle's Travel

Thrown overboard near Fiji by Capt. E. R. Johanson, of the American liner Monterey, a bottle traveled 1,700 miles until picked up by a woman near Moreton Island, off the coast of Australia. A report from Brisbane said the message asked in eight languages that the finder report its recovery to the nearest United States consul, as the information would be useful in compiling data on ocean currents.

Market Prospect Good for Oregon Animal Products

An unusually favorable market outlook for poultry and dairy products and for meats and wool during the 1941-42 marketing season is indicated by a report just issued by the Oregon extension service. The report also points out that farm labor and other costs have advanced materially during the past two years and may be expected to increase further although gains made in farm prices for eggs, milk, meat and wool have been more rapid.

The longer-time outlook is problematical as animal numbers are increasing and much uncertainty exists as to the duration of the present extremely high level of consumer purchasing power. One indicator of the current strength of consumer purchasing power is the record high level of industrial production already 60 per cent greater than before the European war started.

Additional strength is given to the market demand for animal products by the government call for more milk, meat and eggs in the food-for-defense program. These conditions have helped boost farm prices for dairy products 35 percent since the war started, meat 56 percent, eggs and chickens 30 percent and wool 63 percent. Further increase in the level of industrial production appears probable within the next year.

The demand for milk products is being emphasized by the government particularly to supply consumers in this country and for shipment to England and much more meat and eggs are wanted in 1942. Although prices for feed are higher than a year ago the total supply of feeds in the U.S. is larger than last year and far above average. The number of animals is enough greater to slightly more than offset the increase in feed supplies, especially of grain. Hay supplies in relation to livestock are as large as last year and near a record level.

With respect to beef cattle the report says that "from a long-time view point the outlook for cattle would be better if marketings in 1941-42 were heavy enough while prices are high to stop the increase in numbers. Already there are enough cattle on hand to provide more beef and veal per capita than has been consumed for many years, although not as much as a quarter century ago." This is in line with the food-for-defense goals for Oregon.

County Quotas on Food for Defense Being Set

County USDA agricultural defense boards in all Oregon's 36 counties will soon be undertaking the job of setting up production goals to reach county's contribution to the 1942 farm defense program.

The state USDA defense board meets October 5 to review data on past and possible production, processing plant capacities and other factors related to a breakdown of the state production goals into sectional and county goals. The board is consulting with land use planning committees, farm organization leaders and agricultural specialists to determine a distribution of the goals that will bring the production of the needed foods and still be in line with long-range land use programs.

Robert B. Taylor, of Pendleton, chairman of the state board declared that the board is seeking practical methods of stepping up the output of milk, eggs, beef and vegetables in accordance with the state goals but to accomplish the increase on the basis of sound farming principles.

Chameleons' Colors

The chameleon does not arbitrarily imitate the hue of the object on which it rests, nor is the process wholly under its control. The changes are reactions to certain conditions of light and temperature and to various emotional states, such as fear and anger. The physical cause may be traced to two differently colored layers of pigment under control of the nervous system. The best known species is ordinarily a greenish-gray, from which it changes to emerald green or to dull black, sometimes showing reddish or yellowish spots.

Sequoia gigantea the great red-trunked trees of Sequoia national park, California probably the oldest and largest living things in the world today. Note for comparison the size of the human figures at the foot of the center tree. The Sherman Tree, largest in the park is estimated to be between 3000 and 4000 years old and reaches a height of 272 feet with a base diameter of 36 1/2 feet.

For 1942—a Beautiful New

FORD

"6" OR "8"

IN THESE UNUSUAL TIMES we invite you to inspect an unusual new car—new in its beauty, its comfort, its choice of two fine 90 horsepower engines, 6 cylinders or 8.

See it and you sense at once that here is new style that will stay good for years. On a lower, wider chassis, we have designed new long, low, wide and modern lines.

Interior treatment is entirely fresh, distinctive, pleasing. The beauty of this Ford will more than hold its own in any company.

Inside, the car is big—wide across the seats, generous in knee-room, leg-room, elbow-room.

On the road this year you find the "new Ford ride" still further advanced in its softness, quietness, steadiness and all-round comfort.

At the wheel, you will find driving easier than ever. Steering, gear-shifting, action of the big and sure hydraulic brakes have all been made smoother and easier.

In quality, the car is sound to the last detail. Defense requirements have all been met without a single reduction in the basic and lasting goodness of the Ford mechanically. Some new materials have replaced old ones, usually at a greater cost to us, but in every case the new is equal to or better than the old.

If your family needs a new car, go see and drive this Ford. For what it is today and for what it will be through the years ahead, we believe that you will find in it more and better transportation for your money than you have ever found before.
