

SAVING MONEY With Cotton Bags

Here's an idea that's practical for the new baby's layette. Any number of items can be made from the fine, white cloth in Cotton Sugar or Flour Bags. Baby's clothes should be comfortable and most of all must be kept clean. Make them of soft material, easy to launder. A few simple embroidery stitches may be added, but are not at all necessary.

Other Cotton Bag Sewing ideas are illustrated in a free booklet. Write to National Cotton Council, Box 18, Memphis, or Textile Bags, 100 N. LaSalle St., Chicago.

TWO NEW NURSES ADDED TO STAFF OF DEPARTMENT

Two new nurses are being added to the staff of the Clackamas county health unit according to Dr. Dan P. Trullinger yesterday to replace Miss Kay Bisbee and Mrs. Ilona Sullivan. The nurses are Mrs. Kathryn Rees and Mrs. Margaret O'Connell are experienced in public health work.

Mrs. Rees was with the public health department of Klamath county before her marriage a few years ago and now that Dr. Rees a dentist has been called to service she has returned to her profession. She has been assigned to the diagonal strip of territory from Oak Grove, Jennings Lodge and Estacada.

Mrs. O'Connell recently was a visiting nurse with the public health department in Brooklyn, N. Y. She received part of her training at the department of public works at Harvard medical school. Her territory has not been assigned at yet.

Dr. Trullinger stated that federal funds are now available for a fifth nurse in Clackamas county when a qualified nurse is found.

Mrs. Ilona Sullivan will leave for Washington this week to be near her husband who will be stationed there in naval service.

Tomatoes Cheap and Convenient Vitamin Source

Tomatoes are so plentiful in Oregon and useful in so many ways that most homemakers find it both convenient and profitable to store large quantities of them for winter use says Lucy A. Case extension nutritionist at Oregon state college. The belated good weather this fall has extended the season making it still possible to obtain canning supplies.

Tomatoes are the easiest of all vegetables to can Miss Case adds. Because they are an acid vegetable all they need for processing is the heat of boiling water. When placed in jars hot they need only 10 minutes in the boiling bath. If packed cold 45 minutes is needed.

In canning tomato juice Miss Case says the best way to save all the food values is to heat the tomatoes just enough to separate the juice, about 190 deg. F., or just below the boiling point. These are then sieved immediately as exposure to air causes loss of vitamins A and C. After sieving the juice is canned immediately, preferably by the hot water bath method. If the open kettle method is used the juice is best brot to a boil quickly without stirring.

A question frequently asked is "How does tomato juice compare with orange and grapefruit juice in vitamin C." Miss Case says that cup for cup, orange juice has about twice as much vitamin C as tomato juice, but dollar for dollar you may easily get more vitamins for your money in tomatoes. Two tall glasses of tomato juice a day would cover the vitamin C needs of the average person although most people of course get a considerable part of their vitamin C in other fruits and vegetables.

Incidentally she advises against the use of soda in making cream of tomato soup as the alkali destroys the vitamin B and C. Mature tomatoes that have reached their full size but haven't turned red are as rich in vitamin C as ripe tomatoes.

Oregon Ranks Seventh in Storage Locker Numbers

Oregon ranks seventh among all states of the union in the number of cold storage locker plants available for public use according to a survey made recently by the Farm Credit administration a report of which has just been received by Oregon state college.

This state has 164 locker plants with an average of 366 lockers per plant or a total of 60,024 lockers. The average annual rental charged is $7.48 each. All northwest states rank among the first ten in locker numbers, Washington being second and Idaho ninth. In Oregon 67 percent of the locker patrons are farmers.

The increased use of frozen food lockers has a relationship to national defense according to S. T. Warrington who made the survey for the FCA. Because most products are stored in either waxed paper or cartons this method saves tin, zinc and other metals vital to the defense program. Furthermore because most of the meat, fruits and vegetables processed in locker plants are grown locally more transportation facilities, central storage, refrigerator cars and handling facilities can be released for emergency uses.

Giant Cherry Seedling Planting Stock

A giant 40-year old mazzard cherry tree on the Hood River branch experiment station is proving to be the most valuable planting stock for cherry growers reports G. G. Brown, horticulturist at the station.

Seedlings grown from this old tree and then topworked to the commercial sorts such as Bing and Lambert have never suffered and material damage from winter injury or gum, such as often occurs on grafted stock. Of 61 trees being grown from this stock only two Bings show minor and two Lamberts medium to severe crotch injury.

The old tree is now known as station seedling No. 1 and is the center of much work as problems concerning the propagation, growing and topworking of seedlings from it are given extensive investigation.

Much Oregon Wheat Put Under Government Loan

The amount of Oregon wheat placed under federal loan so far this year is already double the total amount for the entire year of 1940 the state AAA office announced.

Two thousand loans totaling $6,742,499 on 7,235,219 bushels of wheat have been reported up to September 15 as approved by the Commodity Credit corporation. Reports from the counties indicate that the flow of wheat under loan is continuing at a heavy rate and will continue until the market price equals or exceeds the 85 per cent of parity loan value.

AAA officials believe that well over half of Oregon's bumper wheat crop will move under loan because of the high loan rate made possible by growers cooperating to limit production under marketing quotas.

Unique Outdoor Museum Perpetuates Native Art

IN Victoria, capital of British Columbia, is to be found the most unique museum in the world, one devoted to the perpetuation of North American Indian art and lore. Victoria, a charming city, situated on the southern tip of Vancouver Island, has among other attractions a unique Provincial Museum. In this museum is assembled what is probably the most outstanding collection of the work of the Indians of the Pacific Coast, a collection which has excited the admiration of authorities from every part of the world. It includes a number of magnificent totem poles, which are easily the finest examples in the world of this form of native art. With unusual judgment and sense of fitness, these totems have been erected on what was, in the city's early days, a popular Indian camping place, and arranged so as to be easily and freely accessible.

The museum has been named "Thunderbird Park" in recognition of one of the most prevalent of the Indian legends. The Thunderbird is a monstrous creature which caused thunder by rustling its pinions and lightning by blinking its eyes.

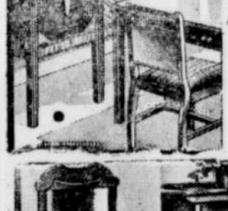

The Thunderbird, the Raven, the Mountain Hawk, the Whale, and the Grizzly Bear—all figures of weird significance in the Indian folklore have been carefully and artistically grouped in the Park. So too, have the several types of poles, namely, the Memorial Pole, the Mortuary Pole, the House Frontal Pole, and many others. The whole ensemble is spectacularly impressive, and interesting to the student and sightseer alike.
