Trash Cans Donated City

Two neat and sturdy trash disposal cans are being donated to the city of Estacada by Larry Benentzen's Real Estate firm. It was announced at last Thursday night's council meeting. The rectangular cans, of 30 gallon capacity, are all steel, with swinging lids for easy access. It is hoped that this gift will be an example to other citizens to take action toward making ours a neater town.

Larry Benentzen, incidentally, is an unofficial public citizen whose concern for civic welfare has brought him out to almost every Estacada city council meeting for the past nine years.

working in the Pacific Northwest to build a permanent forest industry

This year, the 160,000 men and women employed in Washington and Oregon's forest products industry will spend about 189 million dollars on food for themselves and their families.

Food purchases alone will account for an estimated 27% of the 700 million dollars received in forest industry pay checks during the year. These food dollars also will help create employment and income in many fields besides grocery retailing...farming, packing, transportation, service stations, utilities and other services.

Through total payrolls and other expenditures, the forest products industry is the foundation for about half of the economy of the Pacific Northwest.

The stability of the industry is based upon the land's ability to grow new wood year after year. By growing timber as a continuous crop and successfully marketing an increasing variety of forest products, the forest industry can provide steady payrolls.
