SLOW DOWN AND LIVE PUBLIC IS URGED

Nearly 250 individuals, businesses, industries and other organizations are being invited to participate in 1957 attack on summer-time raffic accidents in Oregon through the nationwide show Slow Down and Live program.

The program, which will be the summer phase of the year long 'Back the Attack on Traffic Accidents' campaign, will be launched Memorial Day and continue through Labor Day according to the Oregon Traffic Safety Commission.

Slow Down and Live has one purpose, the Commission said, and that is to stem the hurry complex which attacks many drivers on vacation or weekend trips.

Since there are not enough police to patrol every mile of every highway day and night, Slow Down and Live is an attempt to sell the public on the idea that common sense should cause them to take it easy behind the wheel.

It's also an attempt to curb the nations fatal five violations—excessive speed, driveway, making a left turn in the face of oncoming traffic, passing without sufficient clearance and following too close.

To keep this idea constantly before the public, participants can obtain posters, bumper strips, leaflets, bill boards, lapel buttons, book matches and various other items.

Last summer, Oregon was one of 17 states to achieve a death reduction during the Slow Down and Live period.

EAGLE CREEK GRANGE PLANS POT LUCK

During the Lecture hour Lydia McConnell read from the first record book of the Grange which was established June 13, 1901.

There were many names of old timers in it, a few who are still living.

Mrs. Herman Brackett of Rufus Grange 826 was a visitor.

We have been doing some redecorating in the kitchen and dining room and plan on painting the outside of the building this summer. Refreshments were served in the dining room with a birthday table centered with a beautiful cake for those having birthdays in April. Ruth Potter, Grange Reporter

Home Automation A Big Help To Commuters

The word "commuter" no longer stands only for the fellow who lives in a suburban town and catches the 8:13 every morning for a job in the big city.

These days, the Gas Appliance Manufacturers Association points out, there's an ever-growing amount of long-range commuting from rural areas to the city. Or from one rural area to another, what with industrial plants moving out to the country.

Along with such factors as improved roads and good times, automation in the home is making it possible for more members of the average family to take advantage of gainful employment as much as 30 or 40 miles away. This is especially true of women.

At latest count, GAMA says, some 21,000,000 women in the U. S. were holding jobs, most of them full time. And in most cases this opportunity to supplement the family income was made possible through the elimination of time-consuming household chores.

Time was when a housewife who couldn't get her dinner started by late afternoon would not be ready to serve her family in the early evening. And in inclement weather someone had to be on hand to keep the heating plant going. As a result, any notion that she could leave her home during the day, except for shopping, was strictly wishful thinking.

Today's automatic controls have changed all that. Now gas ranges are equipped with both top-burner and oven heat controls that eliminate pot-watching and help do a better, faster cooking job than was possible during the old "chained to the kitchen" days.

Present-day gas furnaces and boilers are equally automatic. By presetting thermostats for day and night heating, the homeowner is able to rely on worry-free performance without janitoring.

Modern dishwashing and laundry equipment also help save time for non-housekeeping purposes. The gas dryer and water heater do their jobs with neatness and dispatch and without supervision.

GAMA calls attention to the fact that the freeing of families for gainful jobs has progressed as rapidly as natural gas utility mains have been extended to new suburban communities and made possible the use of modern automatic gas appliances. The same emancipation has come to rural dwellers with the expansion of liquefied petroleum gas service—the LP-Gas that comes in tanks and bottles—in areas beyond the utility lines.
